Office of D.C. Tax Collector Assailed as Incompetent

Assessment Inefficient, Citizens Federation Head Asserts.

Needed Until Income Measure Is Voted, Says Committee.

The District Tax Collector's office is incompetent, Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, charged yesterday. He further charged poor assessment administration was responsible for the District's anticipated $6,000,000 deficit.

Another angle on the District's deficit problem developing yesterday was that the Commissioner's tax committee believes the intangible personal property tax should be retained until an income tax is adopted and held constitutional.

"Its name," he said, "should be changed from collection office to receiving office."

About the tax assessor's office, Lodge said, "If the administration of assessment has been as it should be there would not now be the trouble about the $6,000,000 budget deficit."

38,000 Returns Filed.

Lodge declared that of the 619,000 pesons living in the District only 38,000 filed intangible personal property tax returns last year.

Apprehensive lest Congress may write in so many exemptions that the proposed income tax would be discarded by the courts, the committee believed the District, in such an event, instead of increasing its revenue, would lose the $2,500,000 it now collects on intangibles.

Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel, who is drafting the income tax plan at the direction of the Kennedy sub-committee of the House District Committee, said a provision would be made for crediting intangible tax payments on income tax assessments.

Seal estimates the income tax law will raise $2,500,000 more than the intangible personal property tax, or a total of $5,000,000. Should the income tax law be thrown out by the courts, the District would still get the $2,500,000.

Studies Program.

The Commissioners' tax committee met several hours yesterday to whip into shape its revised six-point program for submission to the House sub-committee this morning.

Chairman Kennedy meanwhile explained that his sub-committee has not decided on any local tax program yet and may or may not adopt the income tax plan it instructed the Commissioners to draft.

"We want to see all these proposals in draft form before deciding which ones we'll take," Kennedy said.

Kennedy several weeks ago stated he was opposed to a District income tax. Yesterday he was noncommittal. Other members of the subcommittee, however, are understood to be responsible for the suggestion that it be drawn up.

Adoption of the income tax proposal will mean splitting of the

Congressman Sues For Showdown on 'Jim Crow' Ruling

Testing Arkansas "Jim Crow" statutes, Representative Arthur D. Mitchell, of Illinois, only colored member of Congress, yesterday sought $50,000 damages for eviction from a Pullman near Forest City, Ark.

His charges were filed in Chicago against the Pullman Co., the Illinois Central and trustees of the Rock Island Railroad. Mitchell also will ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to force the Rock Island & Pacific Railway to provide equal accommodations for passengers, in conformance with Arkansas laws.

En oute from Chicago to Hot Springs on April 20, the Illinois representative said the railway conductor compelled him to leave first-class accommodations, called him "violent" and "vile" names, and threatened arrest. He said the conductor admitted there were Pullman vacancies, but said: 'You will have to ride in the second-class coach and no other place on this train, or I'll stop the train and have you locked up."

DuPont Called 'Bear' in 1929 'Bull' Market

Tax and Finance.

Pierre S. duPont was a "bear" in the "bull market" summer of 1929 and made large profits in call money deals before the crash, it was brought out in the New York income tax trial of the Delaware industrialist.

Charles E. Mitchell, once an outstanding power in international finance, lost his appeal against a Government income tax claim for $728,709.—Page 2.

Senator Wheeler, attacking financing methods of corporations, read a letter in the Senate in which an elderly scrubwoman appealed for help in getting back her life savings invested in securities of the Van Sweringen rail interests, recently involved in a series of intricate financial transactions shifting its control.

'Bear' in 1929.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Pierre S. du Pont's activity in the highly profitable call money market in the days before the 1929 Wall Street panic was brought out today in the income tax case against the Wilmington, Del., industrialist and his one-time secretary, John J. Raskob, now his close business associate.

In the "bull market" summer of '29, the elderly du Pont was a "bear." When others were buying, he was selling, it was brought out.

The tax hearing—a slow and tedious procedure involving the tracing of thousands of itemized entries in ledgers and journals—also disclosed that du Pont had a taxable income in 1929 of $35,549,637, represented in capital gains in his holdings.

The multimillionaire's call money loans were shown in a memorandum introduced into evidence by Mason B. Leming, chief of Government counsel in the case, in which the Treasury seeks to collect approximately $1,800,000 in alleged deficiency taxes from du Pont and Raskob.

The memorandum was addressed to Frank McHugh, one of du Pont's office assistants in Wilmington. It was dated June 25, 1929, and read:

"Dear Frank:

"I have been thinking of selling more General Motors common but had not made up my mind to do so until I talked with JJR this afternoon.

"If the stock goes to 76, let out 200,000 shares which will leave about 100,000. Place money on call, preferably with Morgan & Co. or other banks than the Bankers Trust Co. so as to divide total."

The "JJR" was Raskob. Leming said he made the memorandum an exhibit in the case to show the close relationship existing between du Pont and Raskob. He has made many such introductions and after today's entry, James S. Y. Ivins,

Painter of 'September Morn' Dies in Paris at Age of 68

Paris, May 10 (AP).—Paul Chabas, who painted the famous picture, "September Morn," in 1912, died today after a long illness. He was 68 years old.

Chabas' companion during his unhappy last years was a copy of the picture that projected him into world-wide fame.

The copy hung on the wall of his room, the only painting there. Looking at once, he said, 'I'm not quite alone. She's a real person to me."

Oddly, though Chabas believed "September Morn" had in it all he knew of painting, it was the work of a forgotten press agent that was responsible for the fame the picture attained.

The press agent, an American, variously described as Harry Riechenbach or Walter Kingsley, is said to have remarked to friends in New York that he could make anything successful through publicity. As he finished his remark, he chanced to see a copy of "September Morn" in a shop window.

"Do you see that painting?" he asked. "I could make it and the man who painted it internationally famous."

Thus was started the campaign which was to bring copies of the French artist's masterpiece into thousands of American homes and

Slash in Relief Grant Opposed By Roosevelt

Expected to Demand Full $1,500,000,000; House Approval Seen.

By Robert C. Albright.

The President will insist on his full $1,500,000,000 estimate for relief, and has already informally so indicated, it was reliably learned last night in an Administration quarter.

White House support of WPA demands came in the face of an independent effort in the House Appropriations Committee to whittle the appropriation down to $1,000,000,000, and a strong Senate movement to lop $500,000,000 from next year's relief cost.

House leaders said the President's hand in the fight virtually would assure House approval of the $1,500,000,000 figure, even if the Appropriations Committee reported a lower amount.

House refusal to apply the economy pruning knife to Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' budget would transfer the drive for relief slashing to the Senate, where even Administration Senators are lining up for the cut. Senate proposals would go even further, and share the relief burden with the States.

The House deficiency sub-committee, captained by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, chief House advocate of the $500,000,000 cut, may reach a vote late today, and the full House Appropriation Committee later this week. Committee sentiment, leaning strongly in favor of the pruning, took a doubtful twist following word of the President's views.

Harlan Judge Issues Warrants For 3 Deputies

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., May 10.—February's wave of labor violence in Harlan County brought a murder charge today against Frank White, deputy sheriff, and charges of shooting with intent to kill against White and two other deputies.

County Judge Morris Saylor issued the warrants, sworn to by County Attorney Bert Howard. The papers were turned over to Sheriff T. R. Middleton, who was directed to arrest his subordinates.

White, about 40, was charged with the murder of Bennett Musick, 19, son of Marshal Musick, United Mine Workers organizer. Musick was slain when a fusilade of bullets was fired into the Musick home near Evarts, Ky., February 9.

White Noncommittal.

White, round-shouldered and tight-lipped, was noncommittal before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee on his activities in Harlan, although a number of witnesses testified he was a member of the group of deputies which left a Harlan lunchroom, "armed and intoxicated," on the night of the murder, with the threat "We're goin' over to see old man Musick."

One witness even testified he saw White, in the glare of the headlights, in the car from which most of the shots were fired into the Musick home that night at the time of the shooting.

The other warrant against White charges he fired into the dwelling of William Clontz, Wallins Creek, also an organizer. George Lee and Ben Unthank were ordered arrested on similar charges.

Jordon 'Fires' His Attorney For Criticism of Prosecutor

For the first time in Washington's criminal annals, a man condemned to die in the electric chair yesterday "fired" his attorney because the latter criticized the prosecutor's office and the police.

John Michael Holzworth, lawyer and big game hunter, former assistant district attorney of Westchester County, N. Y., is the counsel Jordon has asked be "removed."

Holzworth learned of his dismissal under unusual circumstances. He was told by Harry Whelan, when he called on the latter with a copy of an affidavit he had just filed with the United States Court of Appeals.

In this affidavit, Holzworth reminded the judges that Whelan, now Jordon's attorney, but not Jordon's trial attorney, was attorney in 1931 for Headquarters Detective Robert Barrett, the man who subsequently arrested Jordon for the Jaynes murder.

Holzworth, a member of the public defenders committee of the New York Bar Association, says he went to Jordon's rescue because he was convinced he got a "raw deal." He was defending without fee. Last month he uncovered an important piece of evidence—a police lookout, broadcast the night of Mrs. Jaynes' death which described the killer as a 6-footer. Jordon is only 5 feet 6¼. The police lookout was not mentioned in his trial.

Last Friday President Roosevelt ordered Jordon's execution postpone for 30 days—to June 13—so the Department of Justice could investigate the new evidence. Holzworth had asked for the stay.

On Saturday Holzsworth filed with the United States Supreme Court a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for Jordon, and in this he accused the United States Attorney's office and the police of "suppressing" evidence.

It was because of this criticism,

Voyager Missing In Plunge or Fall From D. C. Vessel

The steamer District of Columbia docked at Norfolk early yesterday minus one passenger.

He was a white man whose name was not found on the passenger list, who either fell or jumped from the ship 45 minutes after it left the Capital, officials of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., operators of the ship, reported.

For an hour after the cry of "man overboard," the steamer was stopped while members of the crew searched for the man.

J. A. Riordan, general manager of the line, said details of the incident would be lacking until the ship returns to the city this morning. He said the captain, Frederick Posey, told him the man's name was not carried on the passenger list.

Court Plan's Foes Arrested Before Rally

The Court Proposal

Two officers of The Defenders, Inc., promoters of a Philadelphia mass meeting at which four Senators spoke in opposition to the President's court plan, were arrested last night, precipitating a furious controversy.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, in a radio speech here, suggested the Senate Judiciary Committee "bury" all pending judiciary revision proposals so that "Congress and the country will be free once more to move forward."

Officers Seized.

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—The arrest of two officers of the Defenders, Inc., on charges of soliciting funds without a permit, failed to interfere with the organization's mass meeting in the Academy of Music tonight, at which four Democratic Senators spoke in opposition to President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan.

L. M. Bafley, national director of The Defenders, and J. B. Carrigan, vice president, both of New York, were released shortly after their arrest—a few hours before the meeting. Detectives said the men would receive hearings tomorrow on charges of violating the State solicitations act.

Officers Cite Complaints.

Detective Sergt. James A. Kelly and Detective Joseph Kraudhaar said they made the arrests on complaints made by the State Department of Welfare and the office of Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti.

At Pittsburgh, Margiotti said: "The arrests are outrageous. If anyone in the attorney general's office requested such action it was without my knowledge or approval. * * * It sounds to me more like someone attempting to embarrass the Administration. * * * Certainly the State of Pennsylvania is against any attempt to suppress freedom of speech."

The attorney general added he was "so notifying the police department of Philadelphia and expressing the wish that those for whom warrants have been issued be released at once."

Owen Wister Summoned.

Bailey said the arrests were "an obvious last-minute effort on the part of State officia's friendly to this (court recognition) plan to try to prevent the people of Philadelphia from exercising their right of public meeting and free speech."

Bailey said a warrant also had been issued for Owen Wister, author, who served as honorary chairman at the meeting. He said Wister would appear with him and Carrigan tomorrow at the hearing.

Speakers at the meeting were Senators Peter G. Gerry, of Rhode Island; Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Patrick A. McCarran, of Nevada, and Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina.

Bailey said the organization "came into Pennsylvania by request

Explosion Inquiry Asked by Parents

Tyler, Tex., May 10 (AP).—The Tyler Morning Telegraph will say tomorrow morning that it has photostatic copies of petitions signed by 222 patrons of the London Consolidated School in Rusk County urging President Roosevelt to order an investigation of the March 18 blast that killed several hundred pupils and teachers.

One petition is signed by 109 parents who lost children and the other by 113 who are said to be withholding their children from classes at the London School until a thorough inquiry has been conducted, the Tyler paper will say.

A third petition in possession of the Telegraph, signed by 323 patrons, is directed personally to W. C. Shaw, superintendent, asking him to resign, the paper will say.

King, Queen Periled By Coronation Crowd At Abbey Rehearsal

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, May 10.—Prince Charles, nephew of King Gustav and brother of the late Queen Astrid of the Belgians, tonight became the third member of the Swedish royal family in recent years to renounce rights of succession to the throne for love of a woman not of royal blood.

King Gustav told the royal council the prince had been given permission to marry Countess Elsa von Rosen, daughter of the court master of ceremonies. She was divorced in 1935 from M. Agols von Rosen. She has three children.

The countess is seven years older than the prince, and although titled is not of royal rank.

The prince will take the family name of Bernadotte and will wed the countess shortly in Belgium, it was understood. King Leopold of Belgium was reported planning to attend the wedding and also to confer the title of duke on the prince.

PRINCE CHARLES.

Prince Charles (Carl) is the son of the youngest of King Gustav's two brothers. Prince Sigvard, son of the Swedish Crown Prince, and Prince Lennart, son of King Gustav's second son, married commoners. Count Folke Bernadotte, a nephew of the King, whose father forfeited his right to succession by marrying one not of royal birth, was wed in 1926 to Estelle Manville, of Pleasantville, N. Y.

1,000,000 Gather In Front of Palace

London Traffic Badly Snarled by Bus Strike; Throng Swelled.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10.—Tremendous throngs, fighting for a glimpse of the British Empire's rulers, broke through police cordons late today as King George and Queen Elizabeth left Westminster Abbey after a final pre-coronation rehearsal, and momentarily threatened physical injury to the royal couple in the crush.

Frantic "Bobbies" battled to drive back the crowds surging around the youthful King and Queen, and finally succeeded in clearing a path for their departure.

Unruffled by the incident, the royal pair smiled and waved to their frenzied subjects as they drove off to Buckingham Palace, where tonight they were hosts at a brilliant state banquet.

Million Gather at Palace.

Outside the palace crowds estimated at more than 1,000,000 swept into the full tide of gay pre-coronation celebrations.

Jamming streets and hotels, breaking through police cordons and trudging gaily where they could not ride—London's busmen are still on strike—the coronation visitors swarmed around the palace.

They roared "we want the king" for hours while inside the monarch entertained at the greatest banquet since the 1911 coronation festivities of his father, the late George V.

Hundreds of cars circled the palace, some with roofs loaded with with singing passengers.

Meanwhile, royalty received another taste of coronation festivity crowding as the speaker of the House of Commons gave a reception for nearly 3,000 overseas guests in the Houses of Parliament.

Nobles Caught in Crowd.

Guests jammed the corridors and libraries of "the mother of parliaments" for more than two hours at the function, which followed the banquet at the palace.

Among those who had to force their way through the throng were the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, the Princess Royal, Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught.

The Princess Royal, only sister of the King, succeeded in making her way through the press only after the cry was raised:

"Make way for Her Royal Highness."

Some peeresses had their handbags knocked from their hands in the struggle, while Winston Churchill, member of Parliament and former cabinet minister, was heard asking a policeman to find a quick way out for him.

Trolley Walkout Seen.

The walkout of 25,500 busmen, tying up 5,000 buses and throwing London's traffic into an almost hopeless jam, gave every indication of continuing through Wednesday, coronation day. Twelve thousand street car employes appeared eager to join the busmen. Some busmen's groups

Wallis to Become Windsor's Bride As 'Mrs. Warfield'

Monts, France, May 10 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor's fiancee assumed her maiden name of Wallis Warfield, her spokesman, Herman L. Rogers, of New York, announced tonight, following legal action in London.

Her name—under which she will marry the former British monarch—is now "Mrs. Wallis Warfield," he said. The "Mrs." was retained at her own request, her spokesman added.

The marriage date, Rogers said, will not be announced before May 17.

An astrologer's prediction coronation week would be "dangerous days" for the Duke of Windsor led his bride-elect today to insist that he be "careful" and keep close to the Chateau de Cande. The duke canceled a sightseeing tour.

Cardenas Hails Inquiry, Denies 'Spy' Charges

The Spanish Crisis.

Such charges were read to the Senate earlier in the day by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, who suggested an investigation of all Spanish partisan agencies operating in this country.—Page 4.

Four Senators joined in support of a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, which would make the 10-day-old neutrality law mandatory.

The autonomous Basque government at Bilbao stripped its military high command of power, vesting it in a defense council composed of President Aguirre and five high army officers.

Espionage Denied.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Former Spanish Ambassador Juan Francisco de Cardenas denied "spy" charges made against him in Congress today and said he would welcome a proposed investigation into all active Spanish partisan "agencies" in this country.

Cardenas, who served successively as Spanish Ambassador to Japan, the United States and France, leaving the latter post at the outbreak of the civil war, laughed at charges that he was making "illegal" use of a diplomatic passport.

Ogden Hammond, Jersey City, N. J., banker and former American Ambassador to Spain, who is associated with Cardenas in raising relief funds for war victims in insurgent Spanish territory, ridiculed the "spy" charge against his friend.

"It is absurd," he said. "I have known Senor Cardenas for many years and I have the highest regard for him. He has sought no special information here and he has no other

Expert Doubts External Cause In Zeppelin Fire

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 10.—The Hindenburg's flaming dive to destruction was described graphically to a Commerce Department investigating board today by two expert eyewitnesses, but neither was able to offer a conclusion as to the mysterious cause of the dirigible disaster which claimed 35 lives.

One of the witnesses, Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, leading American lighter-than-air authority, intimated strongly, however, that in his opinion natural causes, such as static electricity or lightning, were not responsible, and the secret of the disaster lay within the great ship.

William V. von Meister, executive vice president of the American Zeppelin Transport Co., agent here for the German operating firm, confined his testimony to what he observed when flames suddenly engulfed the ship with a safe landing seconds away.

Saw Very Strong Light.

Von Meister's witness stand account of beholding a "very strong light in the upper fin" before he saw any flames, excited considerable speculation at first that the light might have ben a reflection from a hydrogen fire already raging within the hull before any signs of it appeared on the envelope.

He explained later, however, that he meant the light was visible on the overcast sky at the fin and was probably due to flames on the top of the envelope which he could not see from his position on the ground.

Rosendahl definitely placed the outbreak of the hydrogen fire on the upper aft surface of the 800-foot long silver envelope.

"I observed a small burst of flame on the after part of the ship on the top," he said, describing his first warning of the disaster.

"My feeling was at once that it spelled the doom of the ship."

Both witnesses concurred that the ship approached her landing Thursday with usual maneuvers. Rosendahl added the atmospheric conditions were, in his opinion, "en-

Kisses Welcome Dick Merrill and Co-Pilot On Arrival at Croydon After Ocean Flight

By the Associated Press.

Croydon Airdome, England, May 10.—Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, flying the Atlantic "just to break the monotony" of life, arrived tonight on the first half of their round-trip flight from New York to London.

Their silver, twin-engined Electra, its radio apparatus damaged, first landed at North Weald Airdrome, 15 miles north of London. Ten minutes later they were in the air again, and at 6:35 p. m. (12:35 p. m. Eastern standard time) they came in at Croydon, 20 hours and 59 minutes after leaving New York.

The immediate reward of their accomplishment was a series of kisses by two enthusiastic American girls who rushed through the big crowd at the airdrome.

Dorothy Dey, London correspondent for the Philadelphia Enquirer and the Miami Herald, kissed Merrill as he stepped out of the plane.

Peggy Reed, of New York, a friend of Miss Dey, kissed Lambie.

After removing the lipstick Merrill said, "We flew blind the entire way—it was a pretty tough trip."

Both insisted they were in fine condition, however, and expected to be back in New York Thursday, to deliver pictures of King George's coronation.

Both were as casual and businesslike as their mision, carryingtiowdo like as their mission. Carrying photographs of the Hindenburg disaster, they explained they would have been in sooner but for 'very bad weather after leaving the Newfoundland coast."

While customs officials cleared their possessions, Merrill broadcast to America. Then both motored to London.

In case they get restless waiting for the coronation pictures Wednesday, they were granted permission oy the air ministry to fly anywhere in England.

A radio message from the plans at 11:15 a. m. (5:15 a. m. E. S. T.) that it was "100 miles off the Irish coast" and expected to reach Croydon at 2 p. m. (8 a. m. E. S. T.) caused some anxiety when they did not put down until long after this hour.

After they arrived it was generally conceded they had merely misjudged their distance from Ireland.

This was Merrill's third transatlantic crossing within a year. With Harry Richman, New York entertainer, he made the eastward crossing last year in 17 hours 45 minutes, but was forced down in South Wales. He was forced down again in Newfoundland on the return flight.

Merrill and Lambie kept in communication all last night with the Newark, N. J., headquarters of Eastern Airlines, the company which employs them on its Newark-Miami run.

Earlier Decisions Upheld; Rights Not Invaded, Is Opinion.

Ruling there had been no "invasion of some legal or equitable" right of either the Alabama Power Co. or the Iowa City Light and Power Co., when the Public Works Administration advanced funds to a group of Alabama and Iowa municipalities to construct power plants, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday gave its approval to earlier rulings of District Courts dismissing injunction suits brought by the companies.

In the opinion, the Court of Appeals wrote that "plaintiffs' right to be heard in a judicial tribunal resolves itself to the single question of whether or not there has been an invasion of some legal or equitable right. The mere damage that may arise from the competition of the municipalities does not amount to an abridgement or impairment of any such right, nor does the mere making of loans and grants by the administrator of public works, although he may be acting beyond the warrant of law, amount to an impairment of the legal or equitable rights of the plaintiffs."

Continuing, the court asserted, "These utilities have no exclusive franchise to furnish electricity to these municipalities. It is conceded that the municipalities may lawfully compete with the plaintiffs. Any damage which results to plaintiffs from such lawful competition is merely 'damnum absque injuria.' The fact that in furnishing the funds which will enable the municipalities to engage in such competition, the administrator may have exceeded his authority, or may have acted under an unconstitutional statute, does not affect the situation. The thing that affects the plaintiffs is the competition, and that is lawful."

The cities of Florence, Decatur, Sheffield and Tuscumbia and the towns of Hartsells, Russellville and Guntersville were municipalities sought to be enjoined by the Alabama company, while Iowa City, Coralville and University Heights, all in Iowa, were fought by the Iowa company.

AlabamaConcern's 'Spite' Power Line Will Not Stop REA

Montgomery, Ala., May 10 (AP).—John M. Carmody, rural electrification administrator, telegraphed Gov. Bibb Graves today the Federal Government proposed to proceed with building 75 miles of lines in Cherokee County, despite recent construction over the same routes by the Alabama Power Co.

Gordon Persons, chairman of the Alabama Rural Electrification Authority, charged the power company was using "spite tactics" in building a line over a route mapped by the State REA.

The company denied its construction was a "spite line."

Persons announced the REA had offered to purchase the power company's lines in Cherokee County rural areas "at a price it would cost us to build them."

The power company constructed lines in Cherokee County paralleling proposed lines of the Cherokee County Electric Membership Corporation, and REA subsidiary, Persons said, adding it was his opinion REA lines using TVA power would mean a reduction in rates ranging from 50 to 75 per cent.

Procedure and Practice in Reorganization of Bankrupt Corporations Cries Out for Reform; Congress Should Take Early Action.

By Franklyn Waltman

IF there is one activity in the economic and corporate life of the United States which cries to high heaven for reformation, it is the procedure and practice for reorganization of insolvent and bankrupt corporations. Probably more malodorous facts have been brought to light about corporate reorganizations during the depression than about any other aspect of business and finance.

WALTMAN.

Everyone who has followed, even casually, the inquiries into this subject by House and Senate committees and by the Securities and Exchange Commission has been shocked by many of the revelations. In some reorganization cases it appeared that everyone's interest was served and protected but that of the investor.

For that reason the report on protective and reorganization committees sent to Congress yesterday by the SEC is of outstanding importance. Even though the subject is a technical one, this report is one which deserves careful reading, especially on Capitol Hill. It deserves more than that—it deserves prompt action on the recommendations the SEC has proposed to end or curtail existing evils and abuses.

Although the Federal courts, generally speaking, have been indifferent to many of the abuses in reorganizations which have become intolerable, the SEC recommended that control and responsibility for the administration of reorganizations be left with those tribunals. Nor would the commission have the responsibility divided between the courts and an administrative agency.

It proposed, however, that the power of the courts over reorganizations be broadened; that they be provided with "further and more specific standards to guide them and that machinery be designed to afford the courts the benefits of administrative assistance in these complicated financial and business situations."

Among the more specific recommendations are that "in every case a qualified and disinterested trustee should be appointed to whom administration of these insolvent estates should be entrusted;" that counsel for the trustees also should be independent, and that their fees should be restricted; that the SEC should be given the right of intervention; the plans of reorganization should be submitted to the SEC for advisory reports before such plans are submitted to creditors and stockholders; that the right of bona fide creditors or stockholders to be heard on all matters arising in a reorganization proceeding should not be restricted and that indenture trustees should be given a definite status.

The recommendations include numerous other proposals designed to protect the rights of bona fide stockholders and creditors from the racketeers and "sharks"—as Senator Ashurst once referred to them—who make a business of preying on fallen corporations. The adequacy of these proposals is a matter for Congressional consideration.

But the need for corrective action is clearly shown by the SEC report drafted under the direction of William O. Douglas, the 38-year-old Yale law professor, who has devoted the last eight years to a study of corporate reorganizations and protective committees.

As pointed out in the summary of this report the interests of investors in reorganization proceedings is that they should be "expeditious, economical, fair and honest"—and they are seldom any of these. The reason is that, as the SEC report stated, "self-serving objectives and mechanisms incompatible with the needs and requirements of investors have too often caused perversion of the functions of reorganization."

"The personal objectives of reorganizers," the report continued, "are significant chiefly in terms of control of the reorganization. The emoluments of control are the stakes of reorganization. Control means profits and protection. Management and bankers seek perpetuation of that control for the business patronage it commands, which they may take for themselves or allot to others as they will.

"They seek, also, to perpetuate that control in order to stifle careful scrutiny of the past history of the corporation. Thereby, claims based on fraud or mismanagements are stilled; and disclosure of the incompetency or dishonesty of managments, which might interfere with their continuance in control, is blocked. Control for the sake of both of these objectives leads to a great detriment to investors, for as a result costs mount, assets in the form of claims are lost, and incompetent or faithless managements are restored to power."

Among the "emoluments of control" listed by the SEC report were such items as profits for the bankers from underwriting new security issues to raise new money; collateral business which flows from the issuance of securities; protection of management and bankers against claims; depositaryships; committee servicing; property management fees; fees of trustees and receivers and last—but far from least—counsel fees.

The fees paid lawyers in reorganization proceedings leave laymen gasping—and investors indignant. The SEC points out that "corporate reorganization has long been regarded as one of the most lucrative fields of legal endeavor" and that "in the aggregate, counsel fees frequently constitute the largest single item on the list of reorganization fees," in some instances exceeding in amount all other allowances for compensation and expenses.

"The depression with its consequent wave of security defaults," the report asserted, "presented the legal profession with an unsurpassed opportunity to render genuine public service in the rehabilitation of corporate enterprises in the interest of investors. Yet, though there are, of course, exceptions, the profession by and large has not evidenced a desire to promote reorganization expeditiously, economically and solely in the interests of investors.

"On the contrary, it has evidenced ability and ingenuity in furthering the interests of those who utilize the reorganization processes to serve selfish ends . . . In its avarice for reorganization fees the legal profession by and large has forsaken the traditions of officers of the court and has become highly entrepreneurial in nature."

Those words—coming as they do from a professor of law—should cause the legal profession to indulge in a little examining of conscience. The activities of lawyers in corporate reorganizations already have been a matter of deep concern for some of the more responsible members of the profession if an article in the current Temple Law Quarterly by Nathan Boone Williams, of the District of Columbia bar, is evidence.

Mr. Williams in that article declares that "it is neither good sportsmanship nor honest for the bar" to attempt to escape responsibility for conditions revealed in reorganization proceedings and for the "attendant corruption of sound legal and ethical conceptions by suggestions that the judges of our courts are responsible."

"True," he added, "such judicial officers have and cannot escape their proper responsibility for their part in the sordid picture, but it is the entire administration of justice which is tainted and involved. Lawyers are a part of the judicial system. They are responsible officers of the courts. The courts act rarely except upon their initiative and their representations.

"Unless lawyers accept and act upon a very real conception of their fiduciary relation to their corporate and other clients, and with understanding and appreciation of the trustee position of the officers and managers of such corporate clients, and of the duty of the lawyer to such trustees, as well as the duty of the lawyer to the courts and the judges thereof, the whole judicial and legal system of the administration of justice will come tumbling about all of our ears."

To that we say a solmen "Amen."

Al Smith Off Saturday For Europe; to See Pope

New York, May 10 (AP).—Alfred E. Smith said today he would sail Saturday on the Conte Di Savoia for Europe on what will be "merely a trip of private business and personal pleasure."

The former New York Governor said he planned to see the Pope. However, he denied published reports his visit to the Pope was concerned with "a discussion with the Pope for more active plans of the Catholic Church to fight Communism."

Former New York Banker Must Pay U. S. Income Levy for 1929.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Charles E. Mitchell, once an outstanding power of international finance when he headed the National City Bank of New York, lost an appeal today against a Government income tax claim for $728,709.84.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled on issues which four years ago were the dicisive points in a criminal case against the banker. Facing maximum penalties of five years in prison or $10,000 fine, Mitchell was acquitted on tax evasion charges after a two-month trial.

The Government's prosecution began when it was disclosed that Mitchell paid no income tax in 1929. The last word in the case has come only a few days after the disclosure, in a separate tax suit here, that another financier, John J. Raskob, also sent in a return marked "no income tax" for 1929.

Penalty Stricken Out.

The case came before the circuit court of appeals on a petition for review of a ruling by the United States Board of Tax Appeals. The board also had ordered collection of a penalty of $364,354.92, but the court of appeals struck this out, ruling that Mitchell's acquittal in the criminal case in 1933, because it was based on the same facts as the current proceeding, made collection of a penalty impossible.

The most sensational issue of that criminal case was recalled when today's decision, written by Justice Augustus N. Hand, and concurred in by both his associates, Justices Thomas W Swan and Harrie B. Chase, set forth:

"There was ample evidence that the sale of 18,300 shares of stock to Mrs. Mitchell did not represent a genuine transaction, but was prompted by the realization by Mitchell, during the year, of an income from which some loss had to be deducted if the payment of a huge tax was to be avoided.

"The purchase of the stock by Mrs. Mitchell at a contract price of $3,870,600, payable within nine months, and with no way to meet the obligation, is in itself highly improbable, if not fantastic," wrote Justice Hand. It also was noted that Mrs. Mitchell resold the stock to her husband for the same price for which she had bought it on March 4, 1932.

Summoned by Senators.

A year after this transaction Mitchell resigned as chairman of the board of the National City Bank and was summoned before a Senate investigating committee to tell of his financial dealings with his wife.

Then came his arrest at his Fifth avenue home on a complaint signed by Thomas E. Dewey, now New York rackets prosecutor, who was then a young assistant United States attorney. At his trial in May and June, Mitchell, then 56 and at the peak of his spectacular financial career, was called by his attorney, Max D. Steuer, "a big fish" brought to trial "to appease mob psychology."

Mitchell, in his defense, testified he sold his wife the bank stock to record his loss because he "couldn't throw it in the market without causing a drop of $150 a share."

He claimed bank employes wanted to buy the stock but said: "If I had sold it to them, I'd be strung up to a telegraph pole now, with that stock down to $30."

In anticipation of today's verdict Federal officials last September filed notice of a tax lein against all property now owned by Mitchell.

U. T. W. Seeks 35-Hour Week, $18 Minimum

Ellenbogen, Union Leader Take Issue With Altered Textile Bill.

By the Associated Press.

House members, setting out yesterday to draft regulatory legislation for the textile industry, immediately received a request by the United Textile Workers for a 35-hour work week and an $18-a-week minimum wage.

The union's desires were expressed to a House labor sub-committee shortly after it bgean hearings on the Ellenbogen bill to create a "little NRA" for the industry.

The hearings constituted the first major attempt to write specific wage an hour legislation for any industry since the Supreme Court killed the NRA.

Validity "Guaranteed."

He and Frank J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, took issue with a revised draft of his bill which would provide for a 40-hour work week and a minimum wage of $15 weekly for unskilled labor.

Chairman Keller (Democrat) Illinois, of the sub-committee revealed the revised draft had been prepared at his direction by Gregory Hankin, a Washington attorney, but that no one was committed definitely to it.

Whereupon Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, said he wanted it understood he was not pledged to a single line of the measure. He was joined by Representative Welch (Republican), California.

Want Facts in Case.

"The bill was put up here to shoot at," Keller said. "We are here to confer and we want the facts in the case."

The revised measure would set up a national textile commission of three $10,000-a-year members to administer the law and to prescribe regulations. Armed with quasi-judicial powers, the commission also would have power to limit production whenever it found the output exceeded the demand. The bill provides such limitation be accomplished first by elimination of night work.

The commission would be empowered to enforce its edicts by cease and desist orders, much the same as the Federal Trade Commission.

Ellenbogen said he intended to ask the committee to delete provisions banning certain trade practices, because the industry as a whole is not in favor of them.

Grayson Tells How Red Cross Fought Floods

How the Red Cross met the conditions brought about by the Ohio and Mississippi River floods was described to the delegates at the annual convention of the Red Cross in assembly at Constitution Hall yesterday by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman, yesterday.

The annual convention of the group began yesterday, and Admiral Grayson called for "a fresh attack on the accident problems."

Graphic Movies.

Leaders of the Red Cross from every State in the Union attended the gathering and watched the movies which showed what the Red Cross had done when the unbridled waters of the Ohio and the Mississippi swept over the lowlands and inundated portions of Louisville and Cincinnati.

In a brief talk yesterday Gen. Malin Craig declared that all forces had worked together in harmony and efficiency, "which reached almost war-time precision."

"The Red Cross' apparently simple formula of getting and maintaining contact and having workers on the ground or water in every threatened area, county or community, requires speedy and unrelenting effort," asserted De Witt Smith, director general of the Red Cross relief work in the flood area.

Roosevelt's Regrets.

President Roosevelt, away on a vacation trip, wrote expressing regret at his absence. He said "the past two years have given us every cause to be increasingly grateful that we have this volunteer organization of our citizens through which we can express our humane impulses."

Reviewing 1937, Admiral Grayson said the January floods of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers constituted the greatest disaster the Red Cross ever handled. "The work of rehabilitation now progresses to an early completion," he added.

More than 2,000 delegates from all parts of the country crowded the galleries of Memorial Continental Hall and heard a dozen speakers yesterday who touched on many phases of Red Cross work and plans.

Boy Applauded.

A ten-minute ovation was given to the Junior Red Cross spokesman for 8,000,000 school children, Donald Turner, 16-year-old boy from Omaha, Nebr. The youth challenged his adults to help young America solve the new problems which are facing his generation, and to help formulate a philosophy in a world so different from the times of his father and grandfather.

The pageant last night was staged at Constitution Hall, combined newsreel, radio and commentator's remarks, and vividly showed the tremendous dangers and vast amount of work and planning which went in the flodo-relief program, all under the Red Cross.

Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, related many instances of typical heroism of Coast Guardsmen during the flood, and stated that his force had transferred nearly 60,000 persons to safety.

Paying tribute to the "average man," James L. Fieser, vice chairman of domestic operations, mentioned railroad men, telegraph men, highway gangs, telephone operators, merchants, school teachers, doctors and nurses who "played a valiant part" in fighting "flood, flu and winter, the triple alliance which sent 1,500,000 people scurrying."

A full program of committee meetings, business sessions and some speeches fill today until a banquet at 7 when the delegates will hear addresses by Mrs. August Belmont, Vicomte Bonabes de Rouge and R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State. The banquet is at the Willard.

Jordan's Attorney 'Fired' for Criticism

Jordan explained yesterday, that he was asking that Holzworth get out of the case. Holzworth was surprised by the maneuver. He said:

"I hope that Jordon will get a square deal. Certainly he has not got one up to now."

Jordon made known his desire to drop Holzworth in letters written to Justice F. Dickinson Letts and to the clerks of the District Court, the United States Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court. He said:

"I do not wish to appear ungrateful for his efforts, which I believe honest, but I cannot, on the other hand, subscribe to the charges made and hurled so rashly by Mr. Holzworth. If such charges are true I believe that they should be taken care of by agencies provided by law to care for such matters.

"Therefore, your honor, it is with a feeling of regret that I humbly beg leave to have Mr. Holzworth removed from any connection with this case, and that your honor will cause any omtions, petitions or writs entered in the courts over his name to be set aside."

Harry Whelan, well-known local criminal lawyer, remains as Jordon's attorney.

Garment Union Criticizes Reed In Plant Fight

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 10.—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union appropriated $100,000 today for organization activities at a Kansas City garment factory of which the wife of former U. S. Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, is president.

The money was appropriated after Sylvia Hull, Kansas City delegate to the union's convention, charged the Donnelly Garment Co. spied on workers, maintained a company union, worked employes long hours at relatively low wages, and used a speed-up system "ruinous to health."

David Dubinsky, president of the union, charged Reed and his wife, the former Nell Donnelly, "not only exploited their own workers, but by doing so undermined the entire industry."

"It was no puzzle to me," spoke Dubinsky, "why Reed traveled around the country during the last campaign singling out this union for attack in his fight against Roosevelt.

"Reed * * * was afraid of social legislation; he was afraid that with the re-election of Roosevelt and the enactment of new laws the union might move into his shop.

"There is no quarrel between the union and James Reed the politician, but there is a quarrel between the union and James Reed the employer. Our union will not rest until the Donnelly firm is unionized. The moment a worker joins the union he is discharged. * * * It will be the lot of our union to teach him a lesson in true Americanism."

The 520 convention delegates adopted a resolution pledging full support to enforcement of a 35-hour week in the Kansas City plant and abolition of the company union.

Reed Answers Attack.

Kansas City, May 10 (AP).—Appropriation of $100,000 by the International Garment Workers Union to be used in organizing the Donnelly Garment Co. here drew criticism today from former Senator James A. Reed, husband of the company's president.

Reed replied to Dubinsky's assertion that "it will be the lot of our union to teach him (Reed) a lesson in true Americanism."

"He has the nerve to talk about Americanism," Reed said, "although he was born in Russia and has only been in this country a few years."

Reed denied he had any financial interest in the Donnelly company.

"When Dubinsky repeatedly states that he is going to conduct a fight on the company because it is my company, he knows that he does not state the truth. The fact is that Mrs. Reed created the company many years before we were married.

"She still retains an interest, but I have not a dollar invested and never have had and, moreover, I have nothing to do with its management or control.

"Dubinsky's statement that I traveled around the country during the last campaign attacking the Garment Workers Union is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. I passed some observations upon David Dubinsky because he had been put on the ticket as a Presidential elector from New York and I asserted then that Dubinsky was a Socialist if not a Communist and Bolshevist and that his name on the Democratic electoral ticket was an offense to the Democratic Party and to all decent American citizens."

Reed described charges made at the convention that the company here spied on workers and used a speed-up system "ruinous to health" as "grossly and unqualifiedly false." He also denied that employes were discharged for joining any union.

du Pont's tax attorney, objected, saying:

"Mr. Leming has taken four days to prove matters 90 per cent of which were never in dispute.

"We'll save you plenty of time by stipulating the closeness of their relationship."

Du Pont's principal call money account was in the Bankers Trust Co., the amount of which has been made known in the evidence.

During the summer months before the crash, call money was bringing in at one time around 20 per cent in interest.

During a recess, du Pont and Raskob were asked if they were anticipating the October panic, in view of the memorandum on selling. They showed no desire, however, to discuss it.

Du Pont's 1929 income was shown in his tax returns for that year which, together with the 1930 return, was entered into evidence.

His capital gains—taxable then at 12½ per cent—totaled $36,521,293.83, despite the crash in October. In his regular income, du Pont sustained a loss of $971,656.50.

The financier paid a tax in 1929 of $4,443,709. The Government is seeking an additional tax from him of $617,316, and an additional tax of $1,026,340 from Raskob for 1929, contending they entered into fictitious "wash" sales of securities back and forth to establish deductible losses.

In 1930, du Pont's taxable income was down to $2,022,608 and he paid a tax of $21,181. It was previously shown that Raskob paid no income in 1930.

Police to Watch For River Victim

Darkness last night forced harbor police to discontinue search for the body of Robert R. Venables, 20, of 1803 Irving street northwest, who was drowned Sunday in the upper Potomac.

Venables was canoeing with a friend, Norment Custis, 22, of 1839 Irving street, when the current above Chain Bridge capsized the frail craft, throwing both men into the rapids.

Custis said they both started to swim toward shore when the current sucked him under. He said he did not see Venables again because the current carried him down stream for about half a mile before he was rescued by a fisherman.

Police said it is impossible to drag the rapids, but a watch will be maintained near the bridge.

May-December Wedding Fails After Fortune's Disappearance

Wife, 59, Charges Husband, Who Married Her at 18 in 1923, Abandoned Her With Spending of $800,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Thirty-two-year-old Burton Tucker sat smiling in general sessions court today while his 59-year-old wife, who also is his great aunt, testified he abandoned her after her $800,000 fortune had been dissipated during their "May-December" marriage.

The marriage which brought the couple Nation-wide publicity in 1923 went on the rocks July 15, 1936, Mrs. Tucker said, when Tucker came home "awfully drunk" and told her he was through with her.

"He began throwing things around, and left our house," she said. "Now I don't know where I'm going to get food for my children tomorrow. I even had to pawn my typewriter. All my $800,000 is gone. I can bring a hundred witnesses to whom the defendant said 'I'm through with this old woman and her children.'"

Counsel for Tucker, who is being prosecuted on a charge of abandonment of his wife and children, announced he would contend there was no abandonment, that Mrs. Tucker and the children were not destitute, and had a $500 a month income in rentals at the time of the estrangement.

The attorney, Jacques Buitenkant, said the trouble arose when Mrs. Tucker induced a sister-in-law to foreclosure on a house at West Gloucester, Mass., where Tucker was living in order to force him to live in New York, "where he can't make a quarter."

The children are Violet, 13, Burton, 10, and Gloria, whom they adopted in California and who is about the same age as Violet.

U. S. Proposes Curb on Freak Ocean Flights

Ban May Include Coming Lindbergh Race; Merrill Hop Criticized.

The Department of Commerce is "seriously considering" banning future non-scheduled transatlantic flights, similar to Dick Merrill's, Col. J. Munroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, revealed last night.

The assistant secretary's statement came after he had described Merrill's flight as a "freak," asserting that such flights make no material contribution to aviation, and expose the industry to serious loss of public confidence if they are unsuccessful.

Merrill, with his co-pilot John S. Lambie, was given a "restricted license" to fly to London and back, the "NR" insignia on their plane indicating that the license was for a particular purpose. It is such "restricted licenses," the assistant secretary indicated, that may either be abolished or materially changed to prohibit future experimental transatlantic flights.

Pointing out that the Bureau of Air Commerce has been systematically revising all its regulations for the last year and a half, Col. Johnson stated: "At an early date a study will be made looking towards the revision of licenses for what might be termed 'freak flights.'"

One immediate effect of the considered prohibition would be to paralyze the Lindberg anniversary race in August. The Assistant Secretary refused to name a specific date when such a regulation might be announced, but said there is a chance the thing won't come off.

One question, brought up by Johnson's attitude toward unscheduled flights, was whether the department will issue another license to Amelia Earhart for a second try to circle the globe.

To prove that the department is tightening up on its regulations for "restricted licenses," Johnson referred to the Merrill flight again, pointing out that permission was refused to Merrill S. Untermeyer, New York broker, to go along in the plane.

Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, similarly admitted that the whole question of "restricted licenses" is now being discussed. He pointed out, however, that certain licenses—for crop-dusting, for example—served a useful purpose.

The decision as to permits for transatlantic flights will be made on the basis of what useful purpose such flights serve, he indicated.

man, also denied before the committee he had participated in numerous assaults, shootings, dynamitings and other terroristic activities with which other witnesses charged him, but was unwilling to impeach their testimony. He was identified also as a member of the group of deputies who threatened to "get" Musick on the night of February 9.

Sheriff Middleton, whom the Senate investigation showed had made more than $100,000 during his two years as sheriff at a salary of $150 monthly, and who stood on his constitutional immunity several times when questioned as to his participation in various affrays, admitted several times that Lee, Unthank and White were key men among the 379 deputies he had sworn in to "preserve law and order in Harlan County."

Unthank, whom Senate investigators could not locate, was termed by several witnesses the "head road killer" of deputy sheriffs employed by soft coal operators as mine guards.

Sheriff Middleton said he did not know where Unthank now is.

Three other cases were investigated: The dynamiting of two automobiles near the L. & N. Railroad depot here, the throwing of tear gas into the New Harlan Hotel and the shooting and wounding of Tom Ferguson, union organizer.

Sen. Nye to Ask Speedy Inquiry On Spy Network

By Sidney Olson.

After charging Spanish Fascist spies are operating in this country for the unrecognized rebel government set up in Spain by Gen. Francisco Franco, Senator Gerald P. Nye yesterday prepared to ask that the spotlight of a Congressional investigation be turned on "all subersive activities."

The North Dakota Republican, in the Senate, and Representative John Toussaint Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, in the House, in separate denunciations named former Ambassador Juan Francisco de Cardenas and other former officials of the Spanish Embassy as among the principals involved.

Nye said he would ask today, or very sonn, in a formal resolution, that a searching investigation be instituted, which need not be confined to the parties I have named, but might well be of all agencies foreign to our country who are participating in the present struggle to win American favor for one cause and other, as represented in the lines drawn in Spain."

Mandatory Neutrality.

During the brief Senate session yesterday Nye, together with Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Homer Bone (Democrat), Washington, joined in backing a bill introduced by Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), Missouri, which would make the 10-day old neutrality law strictly mandatory.

The four, members of the old Senate Munitions Committee, collaborated on the bill, which would strip the Pittman-McReynolds permanent neutrality measure of the wide discretionary powers it vests in the President. Having failed in their attempt to keep the Senate from concurring in the joint conference report that recommended discretionary neutrality, the bloc took up the fight in this new form yesterday.

Under the bloc's proposal, the President would be required to invoke the cash-and-carry policy immediately upon his finding that a state of war exists abroad. At present he may withhold the cash-and-carry policy indefinitely after he has proclaimed a state of war exists. Further, where the present law has put cash-and-carry neutrality on a two-year trial basis, the bloc would make it not only mandatory, but permanent.

Nye Charges New York Firm.

The group gave up its efforts to make the Senate change its mind on neutrality when the conference report was agreed to April 29. Even Senator Vandenberg, after an impassioned address against discretionary neutrality, left the chamber shortly before the bill came to a vote, thus avoiding the final ballot. The opposition of the others was merely perfunctory on that day.

Nye yesterday introduced into the record the translations of a number of photostats of correspondence which he said "very emphatically tend to show" that the firm of Garcia & Diaz, steamship owners and operators of 17 Battery place, New York, "are part of an espionage network serving the Spanish Gen. Franco and his Fascist state."

Nye and Bernard each devoted particular attention to the "illegally honored passports" of Cardenas and his countrymen, who are supposedly living at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York.

Nye also charged the Spanish freight-carrier Mar Cantabrico, the ship which raced out of New York Harbor with a load of airplanes for Spain before the new neutrality law of January was invoked, "was spied upon by agents who were reporting to Garcia and Diaz in New York, who were in turn reporting to higher up agents of the Gen. Franco forces."

A letter of last autumn named Manolo Alonso, the former Spanish Davis Cup tennis player, and the "American former Ambassador, Mr. Ogden Hammond," as "working assiduously to gather funds and adherents to the cause."

Much of the correspondence introduced by Nye was described in The Washington Post yesterday morning before Nye had spoken in the Senate.

Copeland, Davis, Nye Agree.

Senators Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, and James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, appeared to be heartily in sympathy with Nye's address yesterday, at least as it affected the passport situation. Copeland, after inquiring from Nye whether the diplomatic passports had a fixed time limit, and upon learning they had, said:

"It is a shock to me to find there are men in the United States who have never applied for citizenship who are engaged in subversive activities, * * * that there are men in this country indulging in practices contrary to our institutions. There are means of ridding ourselves of such men, and I, for one, am against either their admission or their continued stay."

Bernard, in the House, followed the lead of Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, who denounced the Fascist "slaughter in Guernica" as the most "unholy massacre of modern times."

Capital Gains Tax Repeal Is Urged by Fiscal Expert

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Revision or repeal of the capital gains tax as a means of stimulating business was urged in an interview today by Arthur A. Ballantine, Undersecretary of the Treasury under Ogden L. Mills.

"More intelligent treatment of capital gains is one of the great needs of Federal revenue legislation," said Ballantine, who is now a member of a prominent New York law firm.

"Better treatment of the subject would place Federal revenues on a sounder basis and would operate against the development of artificial and dangerous security markets and would tend toward the development of industry and an increase of employment," Ballantine said.

Under the present law, capital gains—that is gain resulting from sales of securities, real estate or other investment property—are taxed, although the amount of the tax decreases according to the length of time the property has been held on the theory that this tends to reduce speculation.

"In England," Ballantine said, "such gains are not subject to tax nor are any losses from such transactions permitted to be used in the reduction of taxation upon other items."

He added that the English system has contributed to "dependability in revenues and has operated to permit free and normal security markets."

ARTHUR A. BALLANTINE.

Ballantine said the present system in the United States tends to make investors reluctant to put their funds into the developing of new industries and into promising expansion of old ones.

"The most intelligent long-range treatment of such gains and losses would be to follow the English system," Ballantine said. "In any event we should go promptly to a more moderate and less complicated basis than that provided under the present law."

Cardenas Hails Inquiry, Denies 'Spy' Charges

"Happy" at Nye's Proposal.

"The persons who have decided to attack Senor Cardenas are only injuring women and children sufferers in the war. There are many agencies in America giving aid to the Loyalist side, but our committee is the only one helping war victims on the other side."

Cardenas was reluctant to discuss the attacks on himself but said he was "very happy" Senator Nye suggested a Senate investigation should include "all agencies foreign to our country which are participating in the present struggle to win American favor.

Simultaneously with the Congressional attacks on Cardenas, the Daily Worker, the Communist organ here, started a series of articles purporting to expose "Fascist" spy activities here and also attacking Cardenas. It published facsimiles of the letters introduced by Nye in Congress today.

The letters were signed with the names of Manuel Diaz and Marcelino Garcia, members of a New York shipping firm. It was pointed out at Cardenas' headquarters here that the letters mention him only twice, once in connection with arranging a Carnegie Hall mass meeting for the insurgent supporters. The other simply quotes him as saying a man had arrived from Spain on a "very important mission."

Deny Spying on Ship.

Neither Garcia nor Diaz could be reached today.

One of the principal charges against the agents is that they were watching movements of the Mar Cantabrico, the loyalist supply ship which insurgents captured. Cardenas held this would have been difficult from here as the ship sailed to Spain from Mexico, and not New York, where it was partially loaded.

Cardenas said he was ready to co-operate fully with the State Department regarding any possible discrepancies in his passport privileges. It was indicated he expects to show he is here on an ordinary passport and not a diplomatic passport, as charged.

Jose De Gregorio, former secretary of the Spanish embassy in Washington and now assistant to Cardenas, indicated, however, he has a diplomatic passport. Gregorio pointed out he has had "no occasion to make use" of his passport since resigning his Washington post. He was named by Nye as involved in a "spy ring."

Rebels Advance In Bilbao Area As Towns Burn

By the Associated Press.

Durango, Northern Spain, May 10. Under a pall of smoke rising from burning Basque towns and forests the insurgents drove their lines closer to Bilbao today from the northeast and southeast.

Amorebieta, on the Durango-Bilbao road, is about 7 miles southeast of the Basque capital; Munguia is about the same distance northeast of Bilbao.

Both columns moved under smoke clouds covering many square miles. Observers with the insurgents asserted Amorebieta and Munguia were set aflame and abandoned by the Basques, although they had built formidable trench systems about both.

Burning pine forests fired by air bombardments added more columns of smoke to the clouds hanging over the Biscargi hills northeast of Bilbao.

New Defense Council.

Bilbao, Spain, May 10 (AP).—The Basque capital of Bilbao, its men fighting the insurgent ring in one row of trenches while its women helped dig another row back of the lines, today consigned its fate to a new defense council.

Stripping its military high command of full power, the autonomous Basque government put President Jose Aguirre in charge of the council and named five high army officers as his aids.

Meanwhile Basque battalions blocked the insurgents on the Segona and Galdacano roads north and east of the city, and an Austrian brigade, fighting for the government, was reported to have regained lost ground on the sharp slopes of strategically important Mount Sollube. (One insurgent communique said they took the town of Mugica in this region.)

Throughout the day refugees were taken aboard French and British ships and sent to France. When the Mervia steamed out with 400 women and children aboard, officials here said 7,400 persons had been evacuated in the last five days. (A dispatch from Bordeaux, France, said three French steamers brought 2,000 refugees to Pauillac today and estimated the number of refugees in that area at 4,806.)

Opium Worth $40,000 Is Seized on Freighter

New York, May 10 (AP).—Customs agents reported seizure of 200 cans of opium aboard the freighter Anna Maersk today a few hours after the vessel docked here from Manila.

Agents said the narcotic, valued roughly at $40,000, was discovered by Agent Joseph Flynn during a routine inspection of the ship's cargo. It had been packed in 8-ounce tins and marked tobacco.

A concert and supper will be sponsored by Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, wife of Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, Sunday, May 16, at 3 o'clock, at the Ruppert home in Anacostia, the receipts of which will be donated to the home.

The concert, under the direction of Ambrose Jacobs, will be followed by a talk to be given by Thomas Jerrell. The supper will follow. The public is invited, Mrs. Brown announces.

Expert Doubts External Cause In Zeppelin Fire

Inspect Zeppelin Wreckage.

After hearing the two witnesses, the three-man investigating board and its staff of technical advisers inspected the heavily guarded wreckage of the Hindenburg, then carefully studied the moving pictures made of the disaster, and adjourned until Wednesday.

One theory of the many advanced for the cause of the fire was that the airship's trailer ropes carried a spark from the ground to the ship.

Commander Rosendahl testified the ropes were dropped four minutes before he observed the fire and that it was his opinion they grounded the static electricity accumulated by the ship on its voyage.

"On this occasion it was humid and, without doubt, contact of trailer ropes would discharge any static on the ship," he said.

He also indicated a belief water ballast dropped by the ship during landing maneuvers could not have provided a conductor for a spark from ground to dirigible.

Ballast Usually Dissolves.

"As a rule," he said, water ballast "dissolves and does not strike the ground in a solid stream."

He declined later to state directly what he thought of theories that lightning or sparks from electrical machinery might have caused the fire.

"Lightning, while not a comfortable thing, is not feared," he said. As for sparks, he pointed out electrical machinery aboard the ship was "meticulously" insulated and protected.

Survivor of the Shenandoah crash in 1925 and former skipper of the old Los Angeles and the Akron, Rosendahl testified for nearly two hours, reviewing events prior to the fire and painting a word picture of the disaster itself.

Rosendahl Describes Delay.

Rosendahl told of the airship's delay in crossing the Atlantic and of its approach to Lakehurst.

Because of a local thunderstorm, he said, he sent a message to the airship at 5:43 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) suggesting further delay. At 6:12 p. m. he messaged that conditions were favorable and that the ground crew was ready.

"There was occasional lightning in the southwest," he said, "but local conditions were improving and in my opinion entirely satisfactory for a landing."

The Hindenburg, he said, twice circled over the mooring mast and then nosed in for the landing "in a normal manner."

The ship dropped her manila starter rope at 6:21 p. m. and her port rope a moment later, he said, to steady her nose.

Then, Rosendahl declared, "I observed a small burst of flame on the after part of the ship on the top. My feeling was at once that it spelled the doom of the ship.

Whole Stern Took Fire.

"I saw practically the whole stern take fire at first, after the initial burst on the top. Then the fire spread progressively forward.

"I was greatly surprised there was not more explosion connected with the phenomenon. There were mild explosions during the burning, but in my opinion they were primarily the consumption of the ship by the burning of the hydrogen.

"It is, of course, obvious that I have no knowledge of what was the origin of the fire."

Rosendahl estimated the ship was 200 feet in the air when the fire occurred.

Von Meister previously had suggested the ship's hydrogen might have been ignited by a static electricity spark or by a spark from one of the dirigible's Diesel motors. He voiced neither theory today, the board excusing him after a half-hour on the witness stand.

Trouble at Bow Line.

Describing the landing maneuvers, he said he noticed "there was trouble at the bow line" and that the ship valved water ballast three times, indicating she was heavy in the stern.

"The ship was slowly settling for a landing," he said, "I observed a very strong light in the upper fin. Then there was a burst of flame at the port side of the ship. The whole stern was then ablaze and the ship started to sink. The ship then sank to the ground after having broken at the middle. It settled on the ground and the whole structure collapsed. I ran toward the ship to lend whatever assistance was possible."

Government Restores Order In Catalonian War Threat

Various Factions United After Three Days of Street Fighting; No Further Trouble Feared; Americans Escape Harm.

By O. E. Deeble.

Special Cable to The Post.

Barcelona, May 10.—After three days of street fighting between the supporters of the Catalonian autonomous government and elements seeking to overthrow it, order has been fully restored in this city of more than 1,000,000 inhabitants, the metropolis of northeast Spain.

Government leaders now feel confident no further trouble is to be expected from the Trotzkeyites, the uncontrollable wing of the Anarcho-Syndicalists and other violent elements belonging to various factions who, together, were responsible for Barcelona's miniature civil war.

That the situation was at any time serious enough to endanger the regime of Luis Companys, president and premier of Catalonia, is denied. Apparently foreign governments thought so. The news of the uprising resulted in the dispatch to Barcelona of England and French warships, but no foreign troops have been landed and none have been needed to protect the lives of foreigners living in Barcelona.

Neither the American ambulance unit, which recently arrived here to render medical aid to the Spanish people, nor the American residents of the city were at any time in danger.

The suppression of the uprising has helped clear the air. It has resulted in increased collaboration between the Barcelona and Valencia governments. Immediately following the news that trouble had broken out in Catalonia, troops were sent from Valencia and now together with Catalonian troops and police are in full command of the situation. At the same time the coalition of government parties has been welded together in a firmer union than ever before.

The new government that has come into power in Catalonia contains both the U. G. T. (the Socialist General Workers Union) and the C. N. T. (the National Labor Federation).

The latter is dominated by the Anarcho-Syndicalists and reflects their views. The readiness of the C. N. T. to participate in the new government shows clearly that only a small proportion of the Anarcho-Syndicalists and by no means a representative faction, was mixed up in the recent uprising.

dent Roosevelt's general legislative conference Friday has been reached by the leadership. Next to last of the 1938 appropriation bills, it probably will move to the House floor next week.

May Oppose Report.

Definite assurance the President will stand by his original relief estimates, despite House and Senate moves for a cut, raised the probability of the leadership opposing the committee's report, in event it favors curtailment.

Aside from committee Republicans, Representative Woodrum is the only member of the sub-committee on record for the $500,000,000 reduction. It was said some others who have been supporting him tentatively may hew to the line of the President's request. Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, ranking minority member of the committee, was said to favor the full amount, although he declined comment.

Talk of general reduction in all appropriation bills meanwhile was renewed by Cannon, who said he would renew his proposal for 15 per cent impounding of appropriations, with the President given discretion to restore them, at Friday's White House Conference.

Deficiency Bill Reported.

Other developments:

The Senate Appropriations Committee reported the $81,646,443 second deficiency bill, after adding an authorization for a dam at Gilbertsville, Ky. The committee struck from the House bill a $4,000,000 item for TVA, but authorized the TVA to incur obligation to that amount.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, and other members of the Conference of Mayors, wrote the House Appropriations Committee to "stand by" the President's $1,500,000,000 estimates for relief. This represented a modification of the Mayors' views. They previously had sought $2,200,000,000 for relief.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, claimed increasing Senate support to abolish WPA, and appropriate only $850,000,0000 for allocation by the President to the various States for local administration.

Approval by the Senate Appropriations Committee of the Gelbertsville Dam, as part of the TVA development, was won on a "close vote" on motion of Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee.

Although no additional funds were involved, $2,500,000 would be made available for preliminary work on the dam, which ultimately would cost $112,000,000. The House bill authorized only $739,000 for preliminary investigation. A fixed site for the dam has never been selected. The Senate committee claimed a total reduction of $1,500,000 in the House deficiency bill.

President to Start For Capital Today

Galveston, Tex., May 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt completed an 11-day fishing cruise in the Gulf of Mexico today and prepared to start back to Washington tomorrow morning for important legislative conferences.

He spent his last day at sea trolling for kingfish and jacks en route up the coast from the mouth of the Brazos River.

The gray yacht Potomac, and the escort destroyers Moffett and Decatur, left the mouth of the Brazos at 11 a. m. (Central standard time), for an overnight cruise to Galveston. The President will disembark around 9 a. m. tomorrow.

The city will be on double holiday—for the President's arrival and a municipal election. No incumbent of the White House has visited here in 46 years.

Elliott left the fishing party last night, but will be on hand to greet his father tomorrow morning, along with Gov. James V. Allred, Mayor Adrian Levy, of Galveston, and city officials.

Senate Group, Security Board Join in Survey

Study to Include 8 Major Revisions of Act; Council of 24 Selected.

Supreme Court deliberations on the validity of the social security act notwithstanding, the Senate Finance Committee and the Social Security Board yesterday joined in a unique co-operative study to determine the advisability of amendments which would place the act's operations on a pay as you go basis.

In announcing its survey would cover eight major changes in Titles II and VIII of the act, designed to speed commencement of monthly payments and spread benefits among categories of workers now uncovered, the two agencies said no fundamental revisions of the act will be sought at this session of Congress.

To assist in conduct of the study, the board and the committee joined in selection of an advisory council of 24, 6 respectively for industry and labor, and 12 for the public.

Committee of Three Named.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Finance Committee, announced at the same time appointment of a special committee consisting of himself, Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to co-operate with the board in the study.

This committee is composed exclusively of Senators regarded as conservative in inclination. At the same time each is in sympathy with objectives of the security act. One of them, Vandenberg, is credited generally with sponsorship of the movement for amending the act in the directions suggested yesterday in the joint statement of Harrison and Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the board.

Vandenberg has led, almost single-handedly at times, a Senate campaign against accumulation of a reserve fund of nearly $50,000,000,000 and for extension of scope of the law. This drive later was joined by virtually all Senate Republicans.

Lauds Harrison, Altmeyer.

Yesterday the Michigan Senator expressed his satisfaction with the study and commended Harrison and Altmeyer for their co-operation.

Significantly, the study inaugurated yesterday is limited to two titles of the act. Controversial Title IX, which many regard as most susceptible to the judicial chastening rod, will not be studied. This is the section providing for collecion of taxes from employers.

The Supreme Court returns to duty Monday after a two-week recess, but it is not anticipated it will give its decision on the security act at that time.

Eight Alterations Sought.

In their joint statement yesterday, Harrison and Altmeyer specified the following eight proposed alterations as the subject of the study:

"The advisability of commencing payment of monthly benefits under Title II sooner than January 1, 1942.

"The advisability of increasing the monthly benefits payable under Title II for those retiring in the early years.

"The advisability of extending the benefits in Title II to persons who beome incapacitated prior to age 65.

"The advisability of extending benefits of Title II to survivors of individuals entitled to such benefits.

"The advisability of increasing the taxes less rapidly under Title VIII.

"The advisability of extending the benefits under Title II to include groups now excluded.

"The size, character and disposition of reserves.

"Any other question concerning the social security act about which either the Special Senate Committee or the Social Security Board may desire the advice of the advisory council."

Three Council Groups.

For employes—G. B. Bugniazet, secretary, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Harvey Fremming, president Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers International Union; John P. Frey, president metal trades department, American Federation of Labor; Sidney Hillman, president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Philip Murray, vice president, United Mine Workers, and Matthew Woll, vice president, International Photo Engravers' Union.

For employers: Marion B. Folsom, treasurer, Eastman Kodak Co.; Walter D. Fuller, president, Curtis Publishing Co.; Jay Iglauer, vice president, Halle Brothers, Cleveland; M. Albert Linton, president, Providence Mutual Life Insurance Co.; E. R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of finance committee, United States Steel Corporation, and Gerard Swope, president, General Electric Co.

For the public: J. Douglas Brown, Princeton University; Henry Bruere president, Bowery Savings Bank, New York; Paul Douglas, University of Chicago; William Haber, member Unemployment Compensation Commission, Lansing, Mich.; Alvin H. Hansen, University of Minnesota; Lucy R. Mason, secretary, National Consumers League; Theresa McMahon, University of Washington; A. L. Mowbray, University of California; T. L. Senate Inquiry Discloses Loss In Rail Empire

Scrub Woman's Savings Cut in Half, Wheeler Announces.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators made public yesterday a letter written to the late Van Sweringen brothers by a 68-year-old scrub-woman, pleading for them to "do something" about "my life savings" which she had invested in their sprawling network of railways.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, said the woman Mrs. Anna Teipel, of Covington, Ky., was one of the "countless" investors who lost more than $15,000,000 of the $30,000,000 they paid in 1930 for a Van Sweringen Corporation note issue.

Help Declined.

Her painfully scrawled letter related that "when these bonds or gold notes were issued, I invested $2,000, my life savings by hard work, washing and scrubbing, saved by $1 and sometimes $2 a week, so as to have something in my old age."

The note begged the brothers to buy back her securities "at the best price you can give me, and I need the money. I am making this plea for my sick sister and my niece and her three little innocent children."

A reply from the financiers' secretary informed Mrs. Teipel that the brothers were "unable to be helpful along the lines of your suggestion."

Fifty Cents on Dollar.

When the letter was called to the attention of Joseph R. Swan, former president of the Guaranty Co. of New York, which issued the notes, he testified "it was a darned good thing for the noteholders" that his firm offered to pay the securities off at half their face value.

"It was no pleasant matter for us to advise people to take 50 cents on the dollar for securities we had sold them not long before," the banker said.

"But the world was tumbling around our ears at that time, and the investors might have got still less if they had waited until the Van Sweringen's firm went into bankruptcy."

A few minutes earlier he had testified his firm "did not investigate the balance sheets" of the company before it put up the notes for sale.

Facts Often Hidden.

Committee Counsel Max Lowenthal observed small investors "have great difficulty in getting all the facts" about firms in which they have lost money, and asked:

"What do you think of the advisability of giving some Government agency, such as the Securities Commission, power to investigate securities issues which have gone sour?"

"That's a very big question and I would want a long time to think about it," Swan answered. "I would like for the investor to get lots of protection, but I also feel that the Government is becoming too paternalistic."

He promised to give the committee an opinion in writing at a later date.

Earlier in the hearing J. J. Anzalone, treasurer of the Cleveland Terminals Co., a subsidiary of Van Sweringen Corporation, testified that he had listed $9,250,000 worth of land trust certificates on his books as "long term debt" instead of as property sold "to avoid a possible income tax liability."

Later, when the $30,000,000 note issue was being arranged, he changed the entry to describe the transaction as a "sale," Anzalone acknowledged.

Vice Squad Seizes 3 in Raid, Making 100 in 2 Months

Two men and a woman were charged with operating a lottery yesterday when police raided a grocery store in the 2200 block of Nichols avenue southeast.

Despite raids staged during the last two months by a special gaming squad, the arrests yesterday brought the total number of arrests for the vice squad to nearly 100.

Those charged gave their names as Allen B. Taylor, 30, 1400 block U street southeast; George H. Barton, 41, and his wife, Ruby Barton, 25, both of the Nichols avenue address.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe said a quantity of alleged "numbers" slips were seized with many new books. The Bartons, he said, are the proprietors of the store. Taken before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, the trio was released under $1,500 bond each and the cases continued.

British Peer Killed.

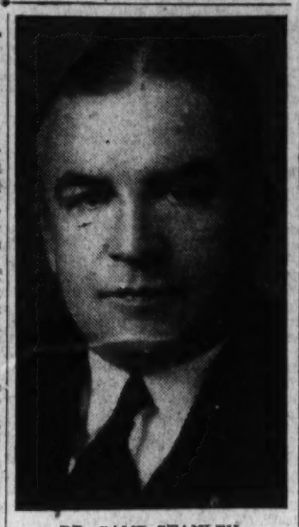
Three Scout Leaders Praise 'Roy Powers,' New Post Comic

Commissioner, 2 Executives Enthusiastic Over Its Future.



DR. CAMP STANLEY.

Dr. Camp Stanley, Scout commissioner for the District Council and other Scout leaders last night added their indorsements of "Roy Powers, Eagle Scout," which started yesterday as a daily feature of The Post's all-star comic page.

In addition to Dr. Stanley, indorsements were received from R. Jackson Ratcliffe, Scoutmaster at Manassas, Va., and Ola Murray, Girl Scout captain of Hughesville, Md.

Said Dr. Stanley:

"I have read with considerable interest the first issue of 'Roy Powers, Eagle Scout,' official comic strip of the Boy Scouts of America. I wish to join with Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, in extending congratulations to The Washington Post for bringing this feature to the city. I look for Roy Powers to be a wholesome influence as his Scouting adventures are published in The Post from day to day. The fact that each strip is approved by Scout executives before publication is, within itself, a recommendation of its value to Scouts and all American boys and girls."

Said Scoutmaster Ratcliffe:

"These comic strips will be highly instructive and, without a doubt, have a high educational value in development of the mind and body. Further, I believe Roy Powers has character training and citizenship building value. My best wishes for the success of Roy Powers, Eagle Scout."

Said Girl Scout Capt. Ola Murray:

"I think the idea of the comic strip, 'Roy Powers, Eagle Scout,' is fine, and I am sure that every Scout will be delighted with it. It will not only be fine for Scouts, but also for those boys who do not have an opportunity to be a member of a Scout troop. My best wishes to Roy Powers, Eagle Scout."

"Roy Powers, Eagle Scout," today begins a new adventure with the Beaver Patrol, of which he is the leader, setting out in search of a lost airplane. In their search they find their cabin has been occupied and left in a state of upheaval by intruders. This discovery brings about a double search—for the lost plane and the occupants of their cabin. Many exciting adventures await them in their search. Start this new adventure strip today on the comic page.

Circus Agents In City to Map Show's Details

Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey to Play Here This Month.

Some 30 traveling men, technicians in the science of ballyhoo, both outdoor and press, rolled into the city yesterday to further a great cause—at least, a great cause to them. It is that of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined circus coming here May 17, 18 and 19 at Union Market, Fifth and Florida avenue northeast.

These exponents of publicity were aboard the No. 1 advertising car of the Big Show, and soon after their arrival they began scurrying around and about the city in a fleet of circus bill-posting trucks to which the railroad advertising car acts as a mother ship.

In an office on the car the contracting press agent, concluding his compilation of advertising schedules, set forth for his visit to the newspapers. He had much to say about the outstanding attractions in the seven-ring-and-stage program of the show. "We've never before had so many new features in any one season," the press agent declared.

Farmers Seek Expanded AAA In Relief Plan

Demand Price Guarantees for Support of Granary Bill.

By Russell Smith

A stream-lined and expanded AAA would be imposed as a superstructure upon Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's ever normal granary plan under a proposed bill now being drafted by representatives of virtually every organized farmer.

The bill, which is being drawn with Administration technical aid not necessarily implying approval, is expected to be put into final shape at a conference here late this week, officials of the American Farm Bureau Federation said yesterday.

It is tentatively entitled "The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1937."

Advance of farm legislative plans, after months of delay, coincided yesterday with announcement by the Department of Agriculture that winter wheat acreage harvested this year is estimated as the largest on record with the exception of the crop seeded in the fall of 1918.

The prospect of spilling granaries, while agreeable to Federal agricultural experts this year, is expected to give additional force to demands of organized farm leaders for extension of Federal control to avoid the disastrous surpluses of post-war years.

Guarantee Demanded.

To that end, the organized farm groups are determined to revive the AAA formula of individual contracts with growers, allotment of base acreages to individual farmers and payment to co-operating farmers of benefits.

But in addition, these organizations insist that in return for support of Wallace's ever normal granary they be given a guarantee that prices will not fall below parity levels. In its last official letter, the powerful farm bureau expressed the view of its leaders engaged in drafting the bill as follows:

"They insisted that if the granary is to be filled to overflowing in order to guarantee abundant food, feed and fiber for the people, then in return the farmer must be guaranteed parity prices and a fair share of the national income. Perfectly willing to put a ceiling on farm prices at parity levels, they insisted that some supporting structure must be devised to keep prices from falling too far below parity levels."

Sliding Scale Sought.

At the last meeting here of Farm Bureau leaders they agreed upon a commodity loan such as is included in the granary plan, as one device to maintain prices. But they demanded a sliding scale of loans. As an instance, if the "visible supply" of a crop is at normal, the loan would be at 90 per cent of the parity price, that is, the average price received in the five years just before the World War.

If, however, the "visible supply" should be at 110, then the loan would be reduced to 80 per cent to discourage surpluses.

On top of this, however, the Farm Bureau bill wold call for a contract of from two to four years, whereby the farmer would agree not to plant more than the acreage assigned to him, in return for which he would be paid "the difference between average market price and the parity level for his estimated yield."

"Little money would be needed next year," the bureau said in answer to the current drive of economy advocates, "because prices are at parity levels and bid fair to remain so. What the farmers want is parity market prices, not big benefit payments."

Victor L. Boenau Rites Held Here

Funeral services were held last night for Victor L. Boenau, 52, organist and choir director of St. Aloysius' Church, who died Sunday in Emergency Hospital, at the William H. Sardo Co. funeral home.

The body was taken to Shelby, Ohio, his birthplace, for Catholic funeral services and burial Thursday.

Mr. Boenau was chief of the adjusted compensation section of the insurance service, Veterans' Administration. He came here in 1918 from Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. Boenau was graduated in 1906 from Ohio State University and was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Margaret N. Boenau, and brother, Faustin M. Boenau, both of Shelby.

Mrs. Leutbecker Funeral Is Held

Funeral services were held yesterday in the National Baptist Church for Mrs. Mary Virginia Leutbecker, 70, widow of W. S. Leutbecker. The Rev. Dr. G. G. Johnson, pastor, officiated. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Surviving are a son, W. S. Leutbecker, jr., of Detroit, Mich.; four daughters, Mrs. L. G. Roscoe, with whom she made her home at 5710 Georgia avenue northwest; Mrs. C. Melcolm Scates, also of this city; Mrs. C. L. Pierce, of Richmond, Va.; and Mrs. A. B. Cheatham, of Norfolk, Va.; two brothers, M. H. Chambers and W. E. Chambers, both of Baltimore; two sisters, Mrs. E. W. Prime, of this city, and Mrs. George Armstrong, of Detroit, and eight grandchildren.

Accused Slayer Of G-Man Fled Prison by Ruse

Posed as Briton to Gain Sing Sing Release; Was Deported.

Alfred Power, the "Englishman" charged with slaying G-Man Wimberly W. Baker in Topeka, Kans., April 16, was revealed yestreday to be Glen John Applegate, Michigan-born former professional football player.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, made public hitherto undisclosed facts in the bizarre career of the 33-year-old desperado, who successfully developed an English accent to get himself deported from a New York penitentiary.

As Alfred Power, he and Robert J. Suhay were arrested by a Nebraska sheriff a few hours after the fatal shooting of Baker in the Topeka postoffice, the special agent being slain when the two men resisted arrest. The alleged bandits were wanted for the robbery of the Northern Westchester Bank at Katonah, N. Y., on March 12.

Investigate Background.

Ever since the pair was captured by Sheriff Homer Sylvester at Plattsmouth, Nebr., the Bureau of Investigation has been looking into their background.

The self-styled British subject was born in Temperance, Mich., October 21, 1903, played football at a Toledo, Ohio, high school and subsequently starred with the Toledo Maroons, a professional team.

His police record began in Toledo in 1924, when he was arrested on a larceny charge, but he did not embark upon his deception program until six years later. In October, 1930, he was arrested under the alias of Gerald Lewis by New York police on a charge of armed assault and robbery, receiving a five to-10-year sentence.

He was sent to Sing Sing, but transferred to Great Meadows prison in November, 1931. He escaped on January 20, 1934, but was recaptured the same day and was given an additional year.

Before entering Sing Sing, Hoover's agents learned, Applegate associated with the bona fide Alfred Power, a British subject and a police character. The pair discussed going to England, Power offering Applegate his passport. Power said he could get back anytime he wished to by the simple process of deportation.

Studied English Accent.

Applegate said he did not carry out the plan but when he entered Sing Sing the idea began to germinate. He picked up an accent by associating with English prisoners and learned all he could about the institutions where Power had been confined.

Previously he had learned from the British subject full details on his relatives, birthplace, birth date and other facts of identification. It was not difficult, therefore, for Applegate to convince immigration authorities when he came up for parole in the fall of 1936 that he was Alfred Power, of England.

So he was deported to London and less than a month after his arrival he stole the pay vouchers of an English seaman, whom he impersonated, to obtain passage back to America on the Aquitania. Disembarking on December 24, he took shore leave without being questioned and never returned to the ship.

Less than three months later the Katonah bank robbery occurred. Applegate and Suhay are still held in Kansas City, Kans.

Burke Favors Shelving of All Court Measures

Seeks to End Controversy; Five Senators Oppose President on Radio.

As Four Democratic Senators joined voices last night in Philadelphia in a national broadcast opposing the President's court re-organization bill, a fifth Democrat, Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, suggested in a broadcast here that the Senate Judiciary Committee "bury all pending proposals" affecting the judiciary.

Burke, an opposition leader, claimed that "adoption of this course will end at once the bitter struggle that otherwise will rage on indefinitely. The fear that grips the hearts of our people will be dissipated. Congress and the country will be free once more to move forward."

As an alternate to the idea of interring the President's court plan in a committee pigeon-hole, Burke suggested further that the Judiciary Committee report out favorably his own resolution—a constitutional amendment which would allow Federal judges to retire at the age of 70, to make retirement at 75 manadtory (except that only one judge of 75 or more could be retired in any calendar year) and require that the Supreme Court could not declare Congressional acts invalid, except by a 7-to-2 majority.

Combines Other Opinions.

This proposal by Burke combines in it the most widely-discussed features of the amendments suggested by several other Senators, it was noted. Senator Carl Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, fathered the "not more than one judge retire-a-year" idea; Senator George Norris, (Independent Republican), Nebraska, has long favored the 7-to-2 majority suggestion, and numerous others have sponsored the "may-retire-at-70, and must-retire-at-75" suggestion.

Other opposition leaders, noting that the Senate Judiciary Committee has for some time lined up 10-to-8 against the court bill, have previously suggested that the committee bury all court measures.

Administration forces, undismayed by the general agreement of most polls that the Senate stands about 48-to-38 against the court bill, with 10 undecided, still claimed yesterday that an "accurate" check had shown that the court bill will pass by a margin of from one to three votes.

Four Speak in Philadelphia.

Speaking in Philadelphia, under auspices of the Defenders of the Constitution, were Senators Pat McCarran, of Nevada; Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina; Royal S. Copeland, of New York, and Peter G. Gerry, of Rhode Island.

McCarran, "swing" member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, whose switch to the opposition insured an adverse 10-to-8 report, made a careful recapitulation of constitutional crises of the past before asserting that the purpose of the President's bill was "to have the courts conform to the views and direction of the political administration in charge of the Government."

Gerry said: "We have seen in this plan an assault on the independence of the judiciary and we know that the religious and civil liberties of our people are endangered. Let the plan go through and their precious rights, now protected by an independent court, may be taken from them by the first President who does not agree that they should be maintained."

Copeland declared that "the pending proposal strikes at the very vitals of our form of government. Those of us who stand guard over our institutions against this fatal thrust are actuated by one desire, and only one. We seek to preserve for posterity the constitutional freedom which we and our forefathers have enjoyed for 150 years."

Bailey's speech, briefest of the quartet and also the most unrestrained in language, insisted that the President's bill "proposed to put the court on relief! This got him nowhere. He then declared that there was a crisis at hand and he needed a court to meet it. He had two horses—the Presidency and Congress. He needed a third horse—the Supreme Court. But the people of the United States do not think of the Supreme Court as a horse, and I hope they never will."

Bigamy Bride Faints During Love-Theft Case

Cullinan's 'Rose Girl' Collapses for 3d Time.

By the United Press.

Detroit, May 10.—Laura Strittmatter, dark-eyed stenographer, who became the bigamous bride of Charles H. Cullinan, of Washington, D. C., collapsed on the witness stand today as she neared the end of her fight against a $100,000 alienation of affections suit.

For the third time since the trial began, she fainted and fell into the arms of her attorney after being forced to read parts of sentimental letters written to her by Cullinan while he was living in Washington with his wife.

Previous Halt.

A nervous prostration last week caused the trial to be postponed for two days.

Mrs. Hallie M. Cullinan accuses the former Home Owners Loan Corporation stenographer of stealing her husband with the knowledge that he was not divorced.

Before her collapse, Miss Strittmatter appeared haggard and nervous as she answered questions in cross examination by Harry J. Lippmann, Mrs. Cullinan's attorney.

Tells of Kissing.

"What does he mean," Lippmann asked in reference to a phrase in one of Cullinan's numerous letters, "when he talks about bruising your chin?"

"Oh, that's what he called kissing me," she explained.

Throughout the letters, which were read into the record last week, Cullinan frequently expressed the urgent desire to hold his "dear sweet rose girl" in his arms and bruise her "sweet little chin."

Catholic Churches Allowed to Reopen

Hermosillo, Sonmora, Mexico, May 10 (U.P.).—Gov. Roman Yocupicio tonight granted permission for Catholic churches to reopen in the State of Sonora, closed three years ago during the administration of Gov. Rudolfo Calles, son of Mexico's one-time strong man, Plutarco Elias Calles.

Ad Club to Honor Vincent Callahan

The Advertising Club of Washington will hold a testimonial luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow for Vincent F. Callahan, former sales manager and assistant to the vice president of the National Broadcasting Co. here.

Callahan, who has served the Advertising Club as vice president and director, is leaving Washington to become general manager of Station WWL at New Orleans.

Among the speakers at the luncheon will be District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Edward F. Colladay, president of the Washington Board of Trade, and Charles O. Gridley, president of the National Press Club.

Slav Police Slay Six.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 10 (AP). Police fired on a hundred Croatian peasants while they were returning by bus yesterday from a festival at Senj, killing six and wounding seven. The police said the peasants had stoned them and made insulting remarks about the King and government.

In Automobile Language:

"SERVICE CHARGE" MAY MEAN EXCESSIVE CHARGE

A typical case which came to the Better Business Bureau is this one which shows plainly how some automobile dealers may deceive people who don't investigate first.

Mr. A bought a used car priced at $410. He paid $100 down; leaving $310 to be financed, for twelve months. The contract (which he signed without investigation because he believed he was dealing with a reputable firm) obligated him to pay $13 for "interest," $22 for "insurance," and $55.20 for a "service charge." In other words, he was paying $90.20 (or almost 30% of the principal sum) as the price for taking twelve months to pay a debt of $310, and Mr. A did not have the slightest idea what "Service Charge" meant.

For your own protection, when you buy an automobile—get the facts. Never sign any blank contracts. Insist that your contract contain a listing of every charge, and a definite, understandable description of what each item is.

Social Agencies Get Guidance On 'Publicity'

Expert Warns Workers That Modern Methods Are Necessary.

The social workers of Washington received a graphic lesson in the interpretation of social service work at the meeting of the District Council of Social Agencies held yesterday at the Young Women's Christian Association.

Miss Natalie W. Linderholm, assistant director of the department of social work interpretation of the Russell Sage Foundation, warned her audience that the technical vocabulary of social workers is different from that of the public and that they must use modern methods of interpretation if they wish to get the attention of the public.

"Statistics are the basis of social work," said Miss Linderholm, "but the static must be taken out of statistics of our interpretations are not to be dull. Social workers must take a lesson from the movies, from modern novels and from life itself. 'The Devil Is a Sissy' is a good example of modern social work publicity. Also Josephine Lawrence's novel, 'If I Have Four Apples' might well be called an illustration of family welfare work, and no better subject as an illustration of the importance of child guidance could possibly be found than the Duke of Windsor. Here is an excellent illustration of what happens when the shy, frustrated child is suddenly thrust into new and exacting surroundings with heavy responsibilities."

Urges Confidence.

Miss Linderholm used these illustrations as methods of the indirect and entertaining approach to social work publicity, but warned her audience that all of their efforts at publicity must be inspired by their own belief in the value of the service that they are rendering the community. "If there is no definite philosophy," she continued; "as to what makes social work real your publicity will not carry conviction. The interpretation of the importance of social work will get its quality from the force of your faith in your own efforts."

Another member of the council added that if the Duke of Windsor was a good example of a lack of child guidance, "social work should also have done something about Wally."

It also was announced at the meeting that Mrs. Wilfred Goodwyn had accepted chairmanship of the family welfare committee and that Ewin Clague, of the Social Security Board, had been appointed chairman of the research division of the council.

Rich Culture, 6,000 Years Old, In Iraq, Amazes Archeologists

Oldest Known Musical Instruments, Splendidly Designed Acropolis of 3 Temples Unearthed at Deep Level.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 10.—The world's earliest musical instruments, landscape paintings and closed pottery kiln yet discovered were exhibited today by a joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and the American Schools of Oriental Research.

The expedition, headed by Dr. E. Speiser, professor of Semetics at the University of Pennsylvania, recovered artifacts from excavations at Tepe Gawra in northern Iraq.

The expedition uncovered levels of the ancient city first discovered 10 years ago to a depth of 100 feet and dating to 6,000 years ago.

"Our previous expeditions already had dug down through 12 other levels at Tepe Gawra which took us successively through the earliest historical periods, including the beginnings of writing and metallurgy," Dr. Speiser said in explaining the exhibit.

"With the knowledge that the thirteenth level was bringing us to the very heart of the fifth millenium, B. C., we had little expectation of finding anything more there than the remains of a primitive culture, skilled possibly in the making of pottery, but with only an incipient knowledge of building and with a correspondingly simple communal organization.

"Imagine our surprise when, at the thirteenth level, dating to about 4,300 B. C., we began to uncover, brick by brick, a splendidly designed acropolis consisting of three temples, each an architectural gem. These temples would have been considered remarkable had they been built thousands of years later."

Bone shepherd's pipes were uncovered in the fifteenth layer and were described by Dr. Speiser as the "oldest musical instruments known to mankind."

District Man Alive As Bullet Enters Brains 'Mind Area'

Because a .32-caliber bullet went through an intelectual area of the brain, and not the part controlling physical functions, Roy Edgar Miskell, 45, who was found shot in his home Sunday, was still alive last night.

Dr. Charles Stanley White, who is treating the wounded man, said yesterday that had the bullet entered the lower part of the man's brain death would have been instantaneous.

Miskell, assistant superintendent of the Masonic Temple, was found by his wife in the basement of their home, 325 Kentucky avenue southeast, when she went to investigate the gunshot report. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where physicians said his condition is critical.

D. C. Budget Bill Hearings Thursday

Senate hearings on the District suupply bill were scheduled tentatively yesterday to begin Thursday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee.

Thomas, upon learning that Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, who has been ill for several weeks, was preparing to return to the District Building, said he would try to arrange to hear the Commissioners and the auditor before the end of the week.

Newsmen in Nashville Pledged Against Guild

Nashville, Tenn., May 10 (AP).—A pledge by employes of the Nashville Banner not to affiliate withthe Newspaper Guild drew from Publisher James G. Stahlman tonight commendation for the "Banner family," which he described as loving "freedom in all its implications."

The employes' statement, signed by all employes of the news and photographic departments, said Stahlman, recently elected president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, "is capable of directing the employer-employe relationship of his own organization without recourse to foreign agencies."

Cleveland Park Minister Unable To Identify 'Cat'

For a half hour last night two men, one a minister and the other a police suspect, talked in the privacy of Police Inspector Bernard W. Thompson's office at police headquarters. The minister's identification of the suspect would draw the Cleveland Park robbery mystery to a close and the 10-year search for "the Cat" would be ended.

But the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister told Thompson and Lieut. Clement Cox he could not say that the 34-year-old man arrested in Alexandria Saturday was the same man he talked to for one hour in his home nearly 10 years ago.

Police, however, were still holding their suspect on the charge of investigation after Mr. Hollister failed to identify him.

"My SKIN now invites a close-up"

"—how well I recall the days and long evenings when I felt tired-out and looked it."

A SKIN that glows naturally bespeaks radiant health beneath... it is alive... stays fresh! So, be good to your skin from within and it will be good to you.

The reason for this is quite simple... skin tissues must have an abundance of red-blood-cells to aid in making the skin glow... to bring color to your cheeks... to build resistance to germ attacks.

It is so easy for these precious red-blood-cells to lose their vitality. Worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll. Sickness literally burns them up. Improper diet retards the development of new cells. Even a common cold kills them in great numbers.

Science, through S.S.S. Tonic, brings to you the means to regain this blood strength within a short space of time... the action of S.S.S. is cumulative and lasting.

Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite. Foods taste better... natural digestive juices are stimulated and finally the very food you eat is of more value. A very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells... to restore lost weight... to regain energy... to strengthen nerves... and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel... and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build sturdy health by restoring deficient red-blood-cells and it is time-tried and scientifically proven.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The large size at a saving in price. There is no substitute for this time tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

Investigation In Order.

Senator Nye, zealous advocate of strict neutrality legislation, has been consistently prompt in urging official investigation of an alleged Spanish Fascist spy ring, with headquarters in New York. Implicated in this activity, according to documents presented to the Senate by Mr. Nye, are certain diplomats who formerly represented the Spanish government in this country.

It does not appear to be clearly established that these individuals, among them Juan de Cardenas, former Spanish Ambassador, have themselves been engaged in espionage activities. But the burden of responsibility to show that these circumstantial charges are unfounded rests on them. And if any of these named are in this country on diplomatic passports, though representing no government with which the United States has relations, that also is a legitimate subject of inquiry. Those who are undesirable aliens in the sense defined by the law would not be less so merely because at one time they may have enjoyed conventional diplomatic immunities.

Plotting of the variety alleged would be inadmissible even if there were no neutrality law on the books. The presence of such a law makes it doubly necessary that foreigners in this country abstain scrupulously from any action that might endanger such a policy.

There may well be doubts in this country as to the wisdom of our neutrality laws. But as long as the law is on the books it must be respected. If that holds for Americans it is doubly true for aliens who are here on sufferance.

Where Employment Lags.

Recent headlines proclaiming that employment is back to the 1929 level are very misleading. In the first place, these current estimates apply only to factory employment. It is gratifying to learn that approximately 11,000,000 persons are now at work in manufacturing plants, which is equal to the volume of employment in the same industries in 1929. But obviously, that is only part of the picture.

In many industries, according to the National Association of Manufacturers, wages are higher than ever before. Employment is increasing rapidly in the Nation's factories. Indeed, there is a shortage of skilled labor in some localities. These facts would seem to indicate that prosperity is in full swing. Unfortunately, however, no generalizations can be safely drawn from the condition of one segment of our economic system.

Since 1929 the population has substantially increased. More people are demanding jobs today. Even in the manufacturing industries a substantial increase will be essential before employment is back to the relative position of 1929. Some other industries have far more lost ground to recover. The construction industry, for example, is still operating at a sluggish pace. A recent report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that residential construction increased more than 100 per cent from 1935 to 1936. Yet the country built less than one-fourth as many dwellings last year as it did in 1925. The record of nonresidential construction is not much more favorable.

It is this lag in the construction industry which accounts, in large part, for the present abnormal unemployment. The manufacturing industry has done well to reabsorb about as many men as it employed in 1929. It cannot be expected to make jobs for the vast number previously engaged in building activities or in the preparation of building materials.

Apparently the most important step toward recovery remaining to be taken, therefore, is an advance in home building. The imperative need for Federal economy seems to preclude any housing program of the type contemplated by Senator Wagner. But it need not restrain the development of private building on a large scale, for this is largely a matter of financial organization and community planning by responsible business concerns.

The condition of the Treasury and the employment lag in the construction industry should combine to concentrate the attention of Congress upon the possibilities of stimulating home building without the aid of Federal subsidies. In any event the largest volume of employment in the construction industry will come from the operations of private enterprise.

The Relief Issue.

All talk of economy on the part of the Federal Government comes soon or late to the subject of relief, not only because of the huge sums spent under this heading but also because the responsibility was accepted by Washington as an emergency measure of the depression period. With the progress of recovery the advisability of maintaining relief as a function of the central Government is therefore naturally subject to increasing question.

Prior to 1932, as Senator Byrnes pointed out in his economy speech a week ago, the Federal Government appropriated no money for direct relief, which "was recognized as a duty of the States, counties and cities." Under our form of Government it is still theoretically desirable that Federal activities in this line should be completely liquidated at the earliest possible moment. The only room for argument is whether or not that time has as yet arrived.

Many members of Congress evidently think that nothing is to be gained by any further perpetuation of Mr. Hopkins' huge and extravagant bureaucracy. There is no doubt that relief needs are still acute, and that concentration of unemployment in certain "depressed areas" would prevent treating all States alike in the matter of Federal grants-in-aid. But at the Capitol there is growing conviction that first steps to retrace the centralization trend in this field are strongly in order.

The validity of this argument is emphasized by the development of a general social security program. Old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, grants to dependent children and blind people are now established governmental activities, divided in greater or less degree between the Federal and State authorities. The same is true of the public employment exchange system, with its network of offices throughout the country. It would be extraordinary if direct relief, with its long tradition of efficient handling under local administration, should alone continue to be primarily a Federal undertaking.

There are many arguments against continuation of the WPA and very few for it. Most emphasized among the latter is the assertion that there would be even more politics and waste in relief operations if the control were local. This argument forgets that if the communities had to raise a major part of the funds, excepting only those clearly unable to do so, financial pressure soon would force efficient administration. At the present time the whole conception of local self-government is withering because communities are not being forced to contribute what they can to the support of their own.

Instead of talking about arbitrary percentage cuts in all appropriations Congress would do well to balance the budget by progressively eliminating those expenditures which are not a logical function of the Federal Government. Among these, outlays for direct relief come first.

It is now a recognized duty of the central Government to facilitate the individual's quest for work through the public employment office system, to further unemployment insurance and to assist in pensioning those incapacitated by age or other physical handicaps. The responsibility of the localities to care for their able-bodied employed who are in need of additional assistance is clearly strengthened, not weakened, by Federal intervention in other spheres.

The tendency of the Administration to assume the responsibility for relief as a permanent obligation is largely responsible for its increasingly precarious financial position. And it is also corrupting the whole basis of local self-government, on the preservation of which national vitality so largely depends.

Scientific Traffic Control.

By inviting Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml to discuss his traffic safety methods here this week, Washington takes a further step in its new strategy of attacking the automobile accident problem with science rather than hysteria.

Lieut. Kreml's accomplishment in raising the highway record of Evanston, Ill., from one of the worst in the country to one of the best is well known. Recently he has made his services available to other cities and in each case his advice has proved effective. Like Dr. McClintock of the Harvard Bureau for Street Traffic Research, who studied Washington's problem recently, Lieut. Kreml depends for his success on the analytical approach. Dr. McClintock stressed the engineering aspects of traffic control. It will be recalled that his first interest was the design of Washington's highway system. In particular, he recommended speedways, perhaps elevated, and underpasses beneath congested circles.

Lieut. Kreml, however, bases his formula on strict law enforcement. His experience has shown that the public will not co-operate in safety efforts without compulsion. Once motorists have been drubbed into driving carefully, Lieut. Kreml then turns his attention to accident statistics. The circumstances of every mishap are meticulously tabulated to show how, when and where they occurred. The "why" of the accidents can then be readily perceived and appropriate steps taken to remedy the causes.

All Washingtonians will follow the application of these scientific methods with the great interest which springs from deep personal concern.

A Local Income Tax.

Washington's finances are in a condition where any reasonable tax bill must be accorded sympathetic consideration. There is no longer any question as to the necessity of enacting rather drastic revenue measures of one kind or another. And in formulating their tax program the Commissioners turn naturally toward sources that might be expected to yield sufficient revenue without imposing an inequitable burden on District residents.

As a matter of principle it is unfortunate to have Federal and local governments levying duplicate taxes. Under ideal conditions the income tax would be left entirely to the Federal Government, just as direct levies upon property holdings are reserved to the States, counties and municipalities. In practice, however, Congress has taxed such commodities as gasoline, and an increasing number of States now rely upon income taxes for some part of their revenue.

Maryland's General Assembly has just enacted a modest income tax of one-half of 1 per cent for relief purposes. Virginia collects a much higher income tax. If a larger share of the relief burden is turned back to the States to relieve the unbalanced national budget, more extensive use of the income tax will have to be expected. Such levies have the virtue of taxing according to ability to pay. They are relatively easy to collect. With most other sources of revenue already tapped, pressure to make the income tax serve double duty is inevitable.

Presumably the proposed levy would supplant the inequitable and ineffective tax on intangible personal property. That would certainly be a point in its favor. Virtually every student of taxation recognizes the undesirability of retaining the premiums upon dishonesty resulting from that obsolete law.

But specific application of income taxes to the District raises many perplexing problems. Congress has always shied away from proposals of this sort because of the difficulty of distinguishing between permanent residents who should be taxed and officials of the Government who are only temporarily stationed here. The Commissioners have attempted to meet that issue by proposing a tax that would apply to all persons whose income is earned in the District, including Government employes and nonresidents who work here.

It is obvious that such blanket coverage would work injustice on some groups. When is salary obtained from the Government earned in the District? A broad interpretation of that provision would seem to extend the applicability of the proposed tax to all Government workers regardless of where they are stationed. That is also indicated by the proposed application of this tax to nonresidents drawing income from the District. Nonresidents would be given credit for income taxes paid to other States. But local residents who are citizens of States without an income base would be subjected to a form of double taxation.

These and other problems raised by the Commissioners' revised bill demand thoughtful consideration. In no field is hasty action followed more inexorably by repentance at leisure than in that of taxation.

The Drowning Season.

The death of Robert Venables is a reminder that we have once more entered "the drowning season on the Potomac." Every year about this time a new series of casualties among canoeists begins. Such fatalities are the more tragic because many of them could be averted even after the capsizings.

Events leading up to the drowning of young Venables are merely the repetition of a very old and sorrowful story. The canoe was caught in the dangerous rapids above Chain Bridge. It turned over and two young men were plunged into the rapid current. Norment Custis, the survivor, apparently owes his life to his good fortune in catching up with the canoe. If both young men had stayed with their craft the tragedy might have been avoided.

Sunday's accidents, together with the large number of people seeking recreation on the water, indicate that strict precautions will have to be taken if a heavy toll of drownings is to be avoided this year. In the first place, the extreme hazards of canoeing among the rapids of the upper Potomac ought to be fully understood. Newcomers to Washington should realize that scores of lives have been lost in those waters. Secondly, every one who goes boating should realize that in event of trouble the best safeguard is to remain with the boat.

Water safety experts claim that a large percentage of drownings result from failure to abide by this simple rule. When a boat capsizes there is a strong inclination for the occupants to take a chance on swimming to shore. In most cases that proves a fatal mistake. Many lives would be saved by adherence to the simple rule of clinging to the boat until help arrives.

A carnival is featuring a man who can turn his head completely around. It is nature's first attempt to adapt the species to being at the crossroads, traffic conditions being what traffic conditions are.

Production For Use.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal represents an attempt to patch up capitalism's weak spots and make it work a bit longer. This is bound to be a failure as it is today for it represents too many contradictions. The New Deal cannot solve the problem of crime or of unemployment. It can apply mustard plasters of the dole or "relief" while at the same time it encourages crop destruction and reduction with a consequent raising of prices and a general lowering of the standard of living of those who depend upon wages and salaries. The New Deal deals with effects, not causes.

There is no use theologizing about the desirability of "a government less greedy for gain and more noble-minded," for economic determination shows that the government is but a committee of the ruling class, which now happens to be the bankers and big business, whose mouthpiece is the United States Chamber of Commerce.

I say this without any venom or feeling against the chamber, but merely as a recognition of its status. When the workers instead of the big propertied interests organize on the industrial field into responsible unions and vote according to their economic interests, such as the Farmer-Labor movement represents, crime and unemployment will be greatly diminished.

Besides the two social diseases mentioned—crime and unemployment—many other problems would be solved by the sociological approach, as contrasted with the traditional theological one based on the inherent "badness" of human nature. Human nature remains more or less a fixed quantity during the ages.

However, as Thomas Buckle shows in his "Introduction to Civilization," man advances due to increasing intelligence rather than to increasing morality." Such disasters as the recent airplane crack-ups and the horrible Hindenburg holocaust would be eliminated, to say nothing of silicosis, mine accidents and the like, if we shifted from a profit motif to a production for use motif in social reasoning.

Daylight-Saving Time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Four months of days when the thermometer will seldom drop below 80—how can we make the best and most of a Washington summer?

Daylight-saving time would be my first answer. In a city where the majority of the workers are on an eight-hour day, every added hour in the cooler, more enjoyable, part of the day is just so much vacation. After all, daylight time does not reduce the day to 23 hours; it merely adds a precious usable hour to the right end of the day.

Show me more than one adult in ten who doesn't normally wake earlier in summer than in winter! As for the children, any thoughtfully and firmly handled child can be shifted in a time habit within from one to two weeks. My own children sleep an hour later on Saturdays than on school days, just because they know they are free to do so.

As for the "tired mothers," who protest that they are already up half the night with crying children (and apparently haven't found any curable reason—even on standard time—for their crying!): Daylight-saving time will be a godsend to them. Instead of blaming their own inefficiency, they can then blame all their own and their children's miseries on daylight-saving time!

Rotation In Office.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It requires eternal vigilance on the part of the electorate to maintain a true system of democratic government. It is owing to the lack of interest in public affairs, and susceptibility to organized propaganda that we are drifting toward a coalition of multiple autocracies.

To avoid further encroachments it will be necessary to have Federal and State acts limiting the holding of offices of public trust in whatsoever capacity to a maximum of ten years. In justice to all we should have some system of rotation in connection with all public offices. It is contrary to the principles of democracy to create a life tenure for any office, and furthermore it closes the doors against enlightened ambition.

In theory, we have a government of, by, and for the people, that is subject to their wishes and desires, but there are subtle organizations in every field of endeavor clamoring for supremacy, and should such supremacy be gained all other elements of society would be held in subjection to their will. Again, appointive offices, other than clerical, are a most potent factor for the destruction of democracy.

There is no gainsaying that there is within each individual a desire to lord it over and hold others in subjection. It's an innate characteristic to rule and, when possible, force others to conform to our opinion and will. When given control of appointments we assume, in effect, the power of a dictator.

Coronation News.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice by the headlines, including those in your paper that H. M. George VI of Great Britain and her possessions is soon to have a coronation, and his brother the Honorable Edward is soon to marry Wally Simpson. The fact is, the news of these two unimportant events seems to outshine all else that goes on today. From reading the papers one would think the American people had no more to think or worry about than George VI, Edward and Wally.

I don't know whether you've heard of it, but we once had an American Revolution. That revolution decided once and for all time that the American people wanted no part of the English aristocracy and none of what its select class performing no useful function stand for. Keep Edward and his troubles over on the other side for we, the American people, have enough of our own with unemployment, low wages and long hours for not less than one-third of our population.

As for the coronation, if the aristocracy of England can't find any better way to waste other people's time and energy, and I won't forget money, I do not see why we should mention it. If you just have to have foreign news why not devote a few more columns on the front page and some more space in your editorials to the Spanish people who are repeating the American Revolution on their own soil against kings and privileged wealth?

Two Different Proposals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on Senator Byrd's proposed bill to consolidate the HOLC and the FHA indicates that you do not get the entire picture.

The HOLC has already bought and paid for and is the owner of the entire $100,000,000 capital stock of an insurance corporation known as the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. It also has bought about $145,000,000 of capital shares of savings and loan associations scattered over the country, and it still has authority to subscribe for another $155,000,000 of such capital shares.

Perhaps Senator Byrd has in mind to save the taxpayers some real money by revoking the authority of the HOLC to continue making such share subscriptions.

Iowa Is Not In The Dust Bowl.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago there appeared in your paper an article that slanders my native State of Iowa. An Iowa Congressman (Mr. Harrington), was presented in the overalls and galluses that cartoonists put on members who hail from agricultural States.

In the headlines "drought-beggared areas" were flaunted, and the Congressman was quoted as having said that "western and northwestern Iowa" are "the outer fringe of the dust-bowl." In "swirling gray-brown shrouds of dust," the Congressman looked "into the harried eyes of grizzled farmers," and we were assured that he "has seen the hot sun dry up its lakes, rivers and streams, kill its crops, beggar its people, while they prayed for rain."

If half of these lurid statements were half true, then farm lands in the once proud Sioux City district of Iowa would not be worth $30 an acre, and the city that 50 years ago built a corn palace that President Cleveland went out to see might as well be abandoned. But to these statements I want to apply a famous speech that the late Calvin Coolidge once made, in two words, to-wit, "Taint so."

I happen to know a great deal about that part of Iowa, for I am land-owner there. Instead of being "drought-beggared," just now it is so soaked in recurring rains that planting is ten days late.

There was a drought in parts of Iowa last year—and what part of our country escaped such afflictions in that somewhat unfortunate and sun-spotted year? But the drought did not dry up the lake and rivers. I was there after the drought and I saw the waters rolling over each other in Storm Lake, and flowing in the Little Sioux as usual. In all that area I saw no men with "harried eyes" wrapped in "gray-brown shrouds of dust."

I know that many suffered severe losses, and some had to accept help which was generously given. I know also that the man who tilled my land paid his rents as usual, and actually paid some of them in advance—and having done that, he and his good wife motored to California to spend the winter. Instead of being "drought-beggared," they built a mile and half of fine paving along my land, and to match that expenditure I had to break a $1,000 bill to erect new fences, and so on.

Iowa has never been any part of any dust-bowl. In our family we have been land-owners for nearly 100 years, and we think so much of our ancestral acres that we refused to sell them at the boom prices of a crazy land speculation. In all that stretch of years I am sure I could count on the fingers of one hand the years that land suffered seriously from droughts, and I am sure that it would take all the fingers of my two hands to count the years that were too wet.

The young man in overalls and galluses, who talked to your reporter, may not have thought of the serious injury he was doing to a great State, or your reporter may have stretched his words to make a striking story, and help him get more money out of the Federal Treasury (which everyone is picking bare nowadays). In any event, it was bad for the good name and credit of a State that is not yet beggared."

In this respect Iowa ongressmen may learn from California, how not to capitalize temporary afflictions for political purposes. In California last winter they lost half of some crops, but in spite of the cold waves and smudge pots no Californian went back on his climate. A good Californian never befouls his own nest.

Iowa, like California, is still all right. It is still the State of the Tall Corn, and may God give us so abundant a crop of it this year that next year we will not have to import corn from Argentina, nor "canned hams" from Poland. When States like Iowa can no longer support themselves without Federal subsidies, then, let's turn our country back to the Indians. All that Iowa asks is fair prices in protected American markets.

The Post Impressionist

Folger McKinsey.

WHEN a man who has never done anything sensational in politics or crime arouses public interest, it is unusual. When a stranger to radio or screen wins popular acclaim, it is worth looking into. And when a modest chap without royal trappings gets a royal reception wherever he goes it's news. So we'll begin with the fire alarm.

The siren sang its strident song and the firemen had their engine and hose carriage on the main street in jig time, and stood by its side at attention.

Into the lovely little town rolled a Baltimore automobile which stopped perforce when the engine was reached. Out of the car there came, by request, two handsome gentlemen. The smaller of the two looked as though he had stepped out of exactly the right kind of bandbox, so correct were his clothes, so shiny were his shoes, so trim was his silvery hair, but his kindly face showed wonderment when the Fire Chief addressed him.

"Sir," said the Fire Chief, "for 31 years you have delighted us daily with your beautiful little poems, in each of which you have caught the spirit of Maryland. You have taken a very real part in the lives of the people of St. Mary's County, and in all these years you have never missed an opportunity to mention us to our advantage, always stressing our good points, and we have loved you for it. The least we can do in the circumstances is to confer on you the greatest honor in our gift. So here and now we make you Honorary Fire Chief of the Leonardtown Volunteer Fire Department."

Fire Chief Roland Duke thereupon took a gold badge from his belt and pinned it on the lapel of the coat of Folger McKinsey, and the Bentztown Bard looked as happy as a small boy with a new bicycle.

The Baltimore Sun's Good Morning columnist is touring the State on a somewhat loose schedule with no hard and fast commitments, and this has many advantages. For one thing, the uncertainty of his arrival gives a refreshing spontaneity to his receptions. Leonardtown was ready for him. Annapolis found time to hand him the key of the city. It is a huge bronze key which he will always prize. And La Plata made him a doctor.

It was this way: He was the luncheon guest of Judge Walter J. Mitchell. Before he was formally introduced to the other guests he was asked if he had any title and he replied that he had none but Mister. Whereupon Judge Mitchell, Mayor Hawkins and other notables present went into a huddle, from which they presently emerged with the declaration that they would forthwith make him a Doctor of Letters; and so, in La Plata at least, he will always be Dr. McKinsey.

These are pleasing things. Even more touching have been the incidents of the trip that lacked any hint of ceremony. In Pocomoke an aged couple made a round trip of 50 miles in order to shake his hand, and missed him. They left word with the editor of the local paper to be sure and tell him that they had read his column from the very beginning.

In Frostburg he went far into a coal mine to meet another Constant Reader. "You've got to see him," said the mine boss, "for if he found out you had been here and I'd let you go without his having a peep at you he'd never forgive me." And the long trip to the old Scotchman was worth the taking. "'Tis good to see you!" said Scotty, and the overtones of the brief greeting contained all the elements of an eloquent eulogy.

Ever so many people brought the Bard flowers, knowing he loved them; and many told him, some with tears in their eyes, how much they enjoyed his poetry. And he was particularly touched by the fact that ever so many fathers read the column to their children, even as their fathers had read the column to them when they were children.

For that's the kind of a column it is: a cheery, homey column, with lilting verse scattered through it like music during service.

The simile isn't far-fetched. Not even when the Bard discusses detective stories, or when Aunt Petunia or Uncle Pilducer indulge in frivolities can I rid myself of the thought that the column is essentially a religious one.

Moreover, I have listened to the Bard at the close of a busy day. There was no smug complacency about the man when, with some prompting, he was induced to talk of his experiences. There was rather a humble wonder that his verse has so many friends and a modest pride in the fact that it should be so. And (a very odd fact in a public speaker) he hadn't a word to say about his public appearance that day, though I happened to know that his readings had been received with enthusiasm, and I called to mind an older summary of the Bard by a very plain citizen, "That guy has something!"

Instead of talking about himself, McKinsey talked of southern Maryland, its restfulness and charm; and he said kind things of its people, and said them with sincerity. But, indeed, the Bard would find kind things to say of people anywhere. There is a tremendous amount of good in humanity if you can only bring it out, and he has a way of bringing it out, for he is a preacher with simple themes, love, and beauty, and kindness and truth. "That guy has something!" You bet he has! He has character!

Fair Enough

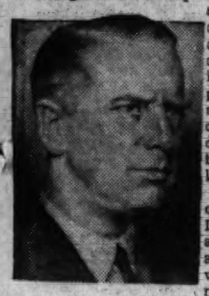
Those Ornery Journalists.

THESE DISPATCHES have no desire to cause international complications and, therefore, will ignore the interesting conduct of Benito Mussolini's invincible legions in the Spanish war. The British journalists have been less discreet for they gave stirring descriptions of the invincible legions in their dashing advance to the rear pursued by the Communist rabble and followed that incident with word pictures of the Duce's heroes in flight before a platoon of Spanish ladies.



It appears that the conquering hosts of the new Italian empire took one look at the Spanish ladies, threw away their rifles—purchased with gold from their mothers' wedding rings—and jumped into the sea to escape death or perhaps a fate which is said to be even worse.

They did not wait to ascertain the ladies' intentions.

In retaliation for this publicity and for frequent mention of the words "Caporetto" and "Adowa" in the British press the Duce has withdrawn all the Italian journalists from England—a sad blow to the British race. The words "Caporetto" and "Adowa" strike an unpleasant note in the Duce's soul. They are not fighting words exactly. In fact, they are quite the reverse, and if Mussolini could extend his authority to the rest of the world he would abolish "Caporetto" and "Adowa" utterly.

• • • •

BRITISH journalists are ornery about some things, however, and whenever the Duce threatens to unleash his invincible legions against Great Britain they inquire whether he means the same sort of invincibles who wrote the name of Caporetto and Adowa in large, if not exactly lustrous, letters in Italian history, who dashed rapidly to the rear in Spain and more recently threw away the rifles purchased with their mothers' wedding rings and jumped into the sea pursued by the Spanish ladies.

In the way they mention these feats of the invincible legions there is more than a faint suggestion that the British are unimpressed. Their sales resistance may be due in part to the recollection of the time when they themselves pulled out of the war in France and rushed down to Italy to turn the Italians around as they raced toward Sicily—one of the greatest advances to the rear in military history.

The Duce is a proud and sensitive man, and though his own papers at his own dictation constantly denounce the British, he sharply resents unkindness in the British press.

That may be hard to understand, but it is quite logical and fair to the Fascist and Nazi mind, both of which resent interference in their affairs but presume to impose their censorship on the free press of Great Britain and this country.

• • • •

THE DUCE recently made a speech about Adowa, in which he said that Italy had a long memory and never forgot a debt. The Italians lost a whole army at Adowa 40 years ago in a fight with a barefoot tribe but captured the town last year in their great defensive war 3,000 miles from home. This time the barefoot warriors were out of town, so the conquest was merely an occupation rather than a fight.

At other places where fighting was unavoidable the invincible legions generously yielded to native African troops the honor of dying for the new Italian empire.

These dispatches keenly remember the time, a few years ago, when Mr. Frank Crowninshield, then the editor of Vanity Fair, almost started a war with Japan by printing a cartoon showing the Japanese Emperor pulling a ricksha. Mr. Crowninshield is one of the politest men in America, and it distressed him to figure as the gavril princip of a new world war, so he promptly expressed regret and averted the holocaust. So these dispatches are studiously avoiding reference to Adowa, Caporetto and the recent Fascist advances to the rear in Spain.

It would be a great loss if the Duce should withdraw the charming Italian journalists from our midst, although the blow would be less severe if he would take along with them the Unione Siciliana and a few boatloads of Lucky Lucianos and Johnny Torries, his Anselmis and Scalese, his Joe Aielos and Al Capones.

The Duce's speech about Italy's long memory, while ominous to the British, may be a message of cheer to this country. For 40 years Italy remembered Adowa and finally paid the Ethiopians back. He hasn't said anything about paying back the war debt to the United States, but it is good to know that he doesn't forget.

The Once Over

Coronation Interlude.

The scene is a chateau in France during the British coronation. The Duke of Windsor is pacing the floor. Mrs. Simpson is seated near a radio set.

Edward—My dear, you promised!

Wally—I know . . . but a little won't hurt.

Edward—The very littlest would hurt. Now please be nice and get away from that radio set.

Edward—No.

Wally—I know how sensitive you are, dear, but I'd just love to hear the part where they leave the palace.

Edward—Now, Wally, I don't want to seem supersensitive, but I gave up all that . . . and I'd rather not be reminded of it. Have you no sensibilities?

Wally—Yes, but it's so childish not to want to hear a thing about the coronation.

Edward—After all, dear, when I decided to skip all that stuff I decided to skip it definitely.

Wally—But your brother . . . don't you want to know how he's doing?

Edward—Now Wally dear . . .

• • • •

Edward—Oh, I say, let's forget all about the old coronation. When you hear one you've heard 'em all. We're through with all that.

Wally—Of course. But suppose you had decided not to attend the Derby and had a horse in it; you'd still want to know who won, wouldn't you?

Wally (stiffly)—Who?

Edward—You and I!

Wally (melting)—You dear! Just for that I won't say another thing about the coronation broadcast.

Edward—That's fine. We'll both be strong. We are in another world and we don't care what's going on anywhere else. Agreed?

Wally—Agreed. But can't we tune in on some hotel program and get some jazz music?

Edward—No. Right in the middle of the music the coronation would come popping through. You know how the radio is. Why, you might even tune in on some Paris concert and get the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wally—Ugh!

• • • •

Edward—What's he saying about somebody being stepped on by a horse?

Wally—I only caught the name Stanley . . .

Wally—But I thought . . .

Edward—I know but it may have been Baldwin!

Million-Year Plow

By Hilding Siversen,
Special Correspondence to The Post.

Chicago.

THE UNITED STATES is such a new country that it is only within recent years that complete scientific facts have become available as to what makes an ideal farming country, and why farm prosperity centers in the Middle West.

The crucial fact in this situation was brought out by the last decennial census of agriculture. In this census was made known for the first time the facts about farms as to their productive power and their relation to national agriculture.

To get the picture whole, it is necessary to go back a million years or so and contemplate a gigantic plow that was driven down from the North Pole over Canada and the midriff of the United States.

The point of the plow was thrust approximately down into western Missouri and eastern Kansas, and the flanks extended northwesterly and northeasterly to crowd against some portions of the Rocky and Appalachian ranges.

Trillions Of Tons Of Soil Plowed Over.

TRILLIONS of tons of soil and rocks were gouged out of Canada and the Great Lakes region and pulverived into a great bed that in some places is 700 feet deep. Three successive waves of ice slid down from the north, and each wave did a different kind of a job, leaving pockets of sand and gravel, moraines of debris, rocky points, deep troughs and innumerable rounded boulders or field stones, besides an enormous bed of finely pulverized new soil.

When this million-year plow had finally finished its work, it left a comparatively level terrain, now called the prairies of the Middle West. The soil is deep, and almost everywhere is overlaid by a thick layer of black loam formed by humus, the growth of bog-peat and the disintegration of hundreds of generations of trees, plants and sod.

Now comes the modern interpretation of this gigantic and prehistoric job of plowing.

In the agricultural census all the 6,288,000 farms in the United States were classified as to incomes. To get at a standard for judgment, the farms producing an annual gross income of $1,500 or more are called first class or Grade A farms. Then every county in the United States was analyzed to see how many of them contained 200 or more of such farms.

From then on, each statistician used his own method. One of them colored red all the counties which contained 200 or more first class farms. He colored green all those containing from 100 to 200 such farms. He colored blue all the counties containing from 50 to 100 such farms, and left white all those below 50 farms. The remarkable fact then projects forth that the combined red and green areas follow almost precisely the area covered by the greatest of the glaciers.

Predominance Of Red Found In Middle West.

OF COURSE, there are red and green spots along the Eastern and Western coasts and in a few densely populated areas elsewhere, but the solidity of the red color in Iowa, eastern Nebraska, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and southern Minnesota, together with the healthy fringe of green extending into other areas, is impressive.

The compiler of the statistics also points out that his red counties receive 35 per cent of the gross farm income of the United States, though the area is slightly more than one-tenth of the total land area. One-fourth of the Nation's 6,288,000 farms are red on his map. In these counties are found 42 per cent of the Nation's high-income farms. Automobile and tractor ownership—a good index of farm prosperity—is found centered chiefly in the red areas.

The significance of this study is emphasized when it is remembered that when the great wave of migration over the face of the country began, more than a century ago, no one knew where the best farm land was. Farms were located by a process of trial and error—mostly error. A tragic amount of experimenting took place when hard-working farmers located on land that nature never intended for farming, by reason of deficient soil, rainfall or other reasons.

Conditions in many places were rectified in whole or in part by irrigation, draining, artificial fertilization and so on. This process was successful in many localities. Like gold, good farming land is where you find it. Maybe you find it in a sheltered valley in the Alleghanies, or on the Pacific slope or in the Deep South, or in New York State.

There is no intention in this little sketch to minimize the importance of farming in sections other than the Middle West. It is obvious that good farming sections are needed—even if by artificial means—in every part of the country. But in the glacial area it has now been ascertained, there is the greatest density of naturally productive soil, for it is here that occur the coincidence of fertility, level land, rainfall and temperate climate.

Mississippi Basin Preordained For Farms.

ANCIENT HISTORY demonstrates that natural advantages determine the drift of migration and the location of great population centers. The Gulf Stream ordained that the northern and coast lands of Europe should become densely populated. The Japan Current performs a similar function for the Pacific Coast of America. Trade winds, mountain ranges, heavy precipitation and other natural forces in many instances determine the course of empire.

So it is foreordained that in the centuries to come, if the people do not allow their rich loam to be washed down into the rivers and the sea, the Mississippi Basin will maintain a pre-eminent place in the world because of the richness of the world's most fundamental occupation—the production of food.

The old plow of the glaciers now traces its ancient furrows on the farm statistician's map.

Duce Places Ban On London News

Rome, May 10.—Premier Benito Mussolini's campaign against the British press swept the London dateline from Italian newspapers today.

For the first time in generations not a line of news from the British capital appeared in this city's press; and all Italian newspapermen in Great Britain were on the way home under orders of Il Duce.

The only London date-line seen in Rome was carried by the semiofficial Vatican City organ, Osservatore Romano—the story was about preparations for the coronation of King George VI Wednesday.

Nor did members of the English colony receive their usual copies of the Times or other London newspapers, with exception of three London papers exempt under Mussolini's ban.

The Italian press carried some comment by German and Portuguese newspapers approving Mussolini's action, giving rise in some quarters to the thought that Adolf Hitler was contemplating a similar move in the Reich.

Palestine Safety Urged by Zionists

Richmond, Va., May 10 (AP).—Members of the seaboard Zionist region urged British government guarantees for the safety of all inhabitants of Palestine as they closed their annual conference today with discussions of "the political future of Palestine."

Daniel Ellison, of Baltimore, was chosen president last night to succeed Rabbi L. Israel, of Baltimore, who was named chairman of the administrative committee. Paul Gordon and Simon J. Levin, also of Baltimore, were re-elected treasurer and executive secretary, respectively.

Vice presidents in charge of various region activities will be Rabbi Theodore H. Gordon, Baltimore; Isidore Hershfield, Washington; Dr. Lazarus Karp, Richmond; Samuel J. Eiser, Baltimore, and Louis E. Spiegler, Washington.

Bishop Birney of M. E. Church Dies in West

Pasadena, Calif., May 10 (AP).—Bishop L. J. Birney, 75, retired, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died today of a stroke of paralysis. A native of Denison, Ohio, Bishop Birney served many pastorates in the East, in China, was a trustee of Boston University and a graduate of Yale University.

Case Of Nerves

By Barnet Nover

Behind Mussolini's Displeasure.

THE ACTION of the Fascist government in recalling all Italian correspondents from London and barring all coronation news from Italian newspapers is something new in international relations. But its novelty is greater than its direct and immediate importance. The British Empire, as an unnamed official suggested to the Associated Press, "will be able to withstand the horrible impact."

Yet as a gesture of acute Italian displeasure with the British nation this and the concurrent act of excluding all but three English newspapers from entry into Italy, are not without very real significance.

It reveals that Anglo-Italian relations, far from having improved as a result of the recently concluded Mediterranean accord, has definitely grown worse. It also makes clear that only in small part is this unfortunate development attributable to any action taken by the British government; that, to a very large extent, it is the direct consequence of the failure of that government to do something which it is in no position to do, namely, control the British press and public opinion whose hostility to Fascist policies shows no abatement.

At bottom, therefore, Mussolini's quarrel is with the existence in Great Britain of a state of freedom which he long ago trampled under foot in his own country.

IN INVITING Haile Selassie to the coronation of the King of England, the British government did, undoubtedly, touch Fascist sensibilities in a very tender spot. But this action could have been conveniently forgotten in the justified belief that before long, Great Britain would come around to recognizing realities in east Africa.

But on top of this action by the government there were the activities of the British press. The reports, given wide publicity in the newspapers of the United Kingdom, of the bloody aftermath of the attempt on the life of Marshal Graziani; the widespread criticisms of Italy's interventionist activities in Spain; above all the repeated references to the Brihuega defeat as "another Caporetto" have been irritating in the extreme to the Fascist regime.

Nor has this been purely for reasons of pride. British agitation has exposed the Achilles heel of fascism which can survive anything but an exposure of its weaknesses, particularly in the field of military action.

IT IS NO secret that Italy's undeclared war on Spain is not particularly popular with the Italian people. The Italian "volunteers" captured by the loyalists have revealed that many of them signed up for service in Ethiopia only to find themselves in Spain. There can no longer be any doubt that many Italians in that unhappy land have no stomach for the task assigned to them.

Sooner or later the state of mind of these disgruntled "volunteers" is bound to spread to Italy itself where family after family is discovering that sons and brothers have disappeared into the void. And while the news of what may have happened to these boys may be kept from the Italian people, rumors are bound to circulate as they have done.

Indeed, the very fact that in the outside world there are places where no censorship exists, where newspapers are prepared to ferret out the truth of what is and has been taking place in Spain elsewhere and to print it regardless of what the government would like them to do, makes that certain. No nation can permanently keep out the clash and clamor of discussion in the outside world. Moreover, the very circumstance that the Italian press has seen fit to denounce the British press campaign against Italy is certain to stir up questions among the discerning as to what it is all about even though only carefully edited excerpts from British periodicals are quoted.

IN ONE SENSE, therefore, the barring of all English newspapers except three which consistently favor the Fascist cause is designed to prevent the infiltration of unfavorable news and views. But the Rome government's irritation with the British press has another and equally important aspect.

In that interminable game of high politics which all nations play the ultimate counters are the military potentials. Only in part can they be weighed and measured—ton for ton, plane for plane, man for man. In larger measure military might cannot be assayed for it rests on intangibles of prestige.

In the Ethiopian conflict Italy scored a clear-cut victory over Great Britain because the Italian war-making potential was reckoned in Whitehall at a high figure. And while the Ethiopian conflict was no real test of Italy's capacity to wage a first-class war, it did mean an increase in Italy's military reputation. In this respect victories even against poorly organized savage tribes have their value. But by the same token, the Brihuega defeat was a blow to Fascist prestige. As such it also tended to reduce Italy's effectiveness in the field of diplomacy.

NOW IT CAN be taken for granted that Italy would like nothing better than the establishment of good relations with Great Britain. Similarly there is little doubt that Great Britain, for its part, would be more than pleased to have the late unpleasantness with the Italian kingdom wiped off the books and Italo-British relations restored to that state of harmony which obtained unbroken from the time of the establishment of united Italy to the outbreak of the Ethiopian war.

The British rearmament program, which has given Italy such concern, is directed far more against Germany than against Italy which, despite all that has happened, is still regarded by Downing Street as a potential ally in a European war.

It is not being forgotten in Rome, however, that the expansion of British military, naval and air power can be used against Italy should the circumstance arise. If, therefore, there is to be a satisfactory arrangement between the two countries it must, from the Italian point of view, be made now, before the British rearmament program has gone very much further and while Italy's prestige remains high.

No wonder, then, that the charges made and repeated in the British press that Italy's military might is a thing of laths and plaster has aroused the Fascist regime to fury. That is why it is suffering from a crisis of nerves reflected in this attack on the hostile newspapers of Great Britain. That they will survive this blow can be taken for granted. It is not they nor Great Britain but the Rome regime itself which will be hurt. For its present display of jitters is proof positive that the British barbs have gone home.

International Prize

By William Lyon Phelps

'Street Of The Fishing Cat.'

I have received an interesting letter from Mr. I. G. Walter, of Philadelphia, who himself received some time ago from a relative in Holland a copy of the French translation of the new prize novel, which in English is called "The Street of the Fishing Cat." This novel was written in the Hungarian language by Jolan Foldes and if I have got the original title correctly, it is "A Halaszo Macska Uccaja," but as I do not know a word of Hungarian, I am not sure I have this right.

• • • •

The important thing is that this novel was awarded the International Prize of 300,000 francs. It has already been translated into 12 languages, and is at this moment one of the best sellers in the United States.

It deserves its universal renown, for it is a genuine realistic novel dealing honestly, faithfully and accurately with the lives of the people it describes. It is neither romantically sentimental nor sensationally vulgar; it is what Guy de Maupassant called "the humble truth."

• • • •

Years ago I used to read translations from the Hungarian novels of Maurus Jokai. I especially well remember one called "Eyes Like the Sea," and I shall never forget the scene where the wolves pulled a man out of a tree and ate him.

Austria and Hungary suffered unspeakably from the war; they had highly civilized people and Vienna and Budapest were among the most charming cities in the whole world. I am delighted that so good a novel, and one that has attracted such universal applause, comes once more from a Hungarian writer.

Germany On Colonies

British Observer Discounts Arguments Offered By Johannsen And Kraft In England; Abyssinia Said No Precedent.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE GERMAN CLAIMS for colonies is eminently reasonable; it may be put in exaggerated forms which allow the controversialist to score easy victories, but given premises that no one openly denies, the German grievance is real. Whether it is important is another question. We are living in a world which, rightly or wrongly, is tying trade closer and closer to the apron strings of politics. The old-fashioned tariff nostrums that used to be the Republican panacea for all economic ills have been taken up by all the world and swallowed with the enthusiasm of a dry Kansas farmer at the Peruna bottle.

Two great powers have almost every commodity needed for their economic life within their own borders. The United States and Soviet Russia can stand practically an endless siege. Two other great powers, Britain and France, have vast colonial empires not joined territorially to the mother countries, but at least in peacetime, bound politically and economically to their European mistresses. Three small European countries, Holland, Belgium and Portugal, have colonial empires which, if the size of the mother country is considered, are even vaster than those of Britain and France. Two other great powers, Japan and Italy, are busy getting in on the ground floor.

Germany alone among the great independent nations of the world has to live off her own territory and that territory is not very abundant and not very rich. This argument the Germans push rather too far, for neither Britain nor Italy have any real advantage over Germany in population per acre, but France, with two-thirds of Germany's population and a larger and in most ways more desirable country, has a great colonial empire as well. Of the European great powers (not counting Russia), France is nearest self-sufficiency, yet she has an immense colonial empire. Is this fair, is this reasonable? Of course not and it is natural that Germany should complain.

Colonial Proposals Only Rile Up Britain.

IT IS NATURAL but it is not prudent. That is to say, if it is desired to keep British public opinion either friendly or neutral toward Germany. The German case (ably set out by Drs. Johannsen and Kraft in "Germany's Colonial Problem," (London, Thornton, Butterworth) is one easily stated and hard to refute.

At the peace conference, the victors, anxious to placate America or even, possibly, their own consciences, took Germany's colonies away from her on grounds like those stated in the so-called "war guilt" clauses. They asserted that Germany had governed her colonies badly, had exploited and ill-treated the natives. This was true, but what colonial empire in its early years has any better record (ask the inhabitants of Addis Ababa in 1937!)?

The colonies thus seized were put under mandates from the League of Nations, again a device designed to soothe America and also to placate those persons in France and England who had fought for democracy against imperialism. Drs. Johannsen and Kraft have no difficulty in showing that this was mainly humbug and from that they go on to argue that Germany has a title to immediate restoration of all her own colonies. (Those seized by Japan are prudently left out of the discussion.)

This argument suffers from one fault, but a serious one; it assumes that there is some ideal date in history to which it is right that the world should return. For Germans that date is 1914. That is natural enough for a German, but what is there sacred in such a date? A great deal of the political geography of the world was based on diplomatic lies covering military successes just as immoral (if that is the word) as anything done at Versailles. Drs. Johannsen and Kraft no doubt remember the fate of the plebiscitary clauses of the treaty by which Denmark gave up Schleswig-Holstein. A Dane, arguing in Berlin in 1913 for an enforcement of that treaty on moral grounds would be just as sound as a German proving a moral title to Tanganyika in 1937.

Difference Admitted In Denmark's Weakness.

THERE IS a difference, it will be argued. There is. Denmark was weak, Germany is strong, and that is a real argument in the modern world. The authors of this tract would have been better advised for the purpose of converting British opinion to have paid less attention to the opinions of Mr. Dawson's persuasive pro-German arguments and to forget what the Great Elector did for the aggrandizement of Prussia and to concentrate on the question of persuading the British public that certain colonial areas would be more use to Germany than they are to Britain (or France). That might be done. They would have to tackle frankly the opinion that is assumed to be a self-evident truth by many simple Britons, that colonies which are of no use to Germany are valuable to Britain.

In tackling that superstition they would be wise to avoid stressing the population problem, as long as the German government encourages a rising population and as long as it is evident that the old German colonies, whatever else they may be, are not an outlet for surplus population. They are an outlet for some vigorous young men and, had Germany had a colonial empire, she might never have had a Nazi revolution; many a potent Gauleiter might now be sweltering in Tanganyika instead of keeping his area sound. Moreover, it should be noticed that in the two former German colonies where there is a little white settlement, the white population of German origin is now outnumbered by the white population of other origin.

Germans may argue that if southwest Africa and Tanganyika had never passed out of German hands this would not be so. True, but these colonies have been out of German hands for 20 years and, except on the principle of tempus non occurrit Germaniae, the settlers have a right to stay where they are and a right to object (as they certainly would) to transfer to German rule, above all to Nazi rule.

Our authors have to do some fancy skating over the race question, for it is often asserted in England that the German colonies should not be returned to Germany since that benighted country does not believe in race equality. This is often humbug, but it is not always humbug. It is no national prejudice (I hope) which makes me suspect that native interests in Tanganyika would be safer in the hands of the average British officer (I do not say settler) than in the hands of the average German official, that unharmonized Oxford breeds a type more sympathetic toward backward peoples than co-ordinated Heidelberg or Gottingen.

South Africa's Words Designed Only for Export.

A CERTAIN LACK of realism hangs about a book that takes seriously the fine words of such eminent South Africans as Mr. Pirow. Germany has recently learned (what she could have learned by inquiry in London) that South African moralizings on public wrong are almost exclusively for export. The South African government has crushed the Nazis in her share of the German spoils as anyone knew she would. No British dominion will give up anything, but the mother country is less intransigent.

Real imperial sentiment is weak in an England that knows she has at least as much of the world as she can digest. There was plausibility in the old free-trade days in asserting that Britain held her empire as a trustee; there is none today, when the crown colonies are inside a ring fence of increasing height. Eminent British statesmen like Sir Robert Horne may pretend that Germany (and all the non-colonial countries, too) have no grievance, but if they reflect (perhaps they don't) they know that this is not true.

Unfortunately, those sections of British opinion that are more willing to do something to meet the real economic grievance of countries like Germany, are most hostile to the new German regime. Those sections that would like to aid Germany are temperamentally averse to giving up anything. There are people like Sir Arnold Wilson, who are not only sympathetic to Germany, but say boldly that British youth will not fight to keep the Germans out of southwest Africa. And the British government has studiously refused to say that it will never surrender territory to Germany. But it has never dared to do more than that.

German Desire Seen To Keep Up With Joneses.

THE SERIOUS economic and to some extent the sentimental arguments of German colonial propagandists are most likely to meet satisfaction from some extension of the mandate system. But at least half of the German desire for colonies is a desire to keep up with the Joneses, to have what her neighbors have. It is difficult to see how this desire is to be met unless as a result of a war or of a great international settlement.

If there were such a settlement, many things might be done, but such a general settlement is something from which Germany shies away. The colonial campaign is not baseless economically (though its economic claims are exaggerated), but it is expensive politically because of its irritant effect on British opinion.

Can't some competent German historian find a sound claim to the Portuguese colonies? Or if he can't why not let sleeping dogs lie for a bit. Or even forever for, unless memory fails me, Herr Hitler used to think this colonial talk was all nonsense. In a diplomatic sense he was right and if he has to give the colonial propagandists their heads, it suggests that Germany needs some distraction, some visible sign of external glory. That is very natural, but it is probably a mistake to seek it from Britain. Abyssinia is not a precedent for British reactions; we did not own Abyssinia and our air forces were less impressive than they are rapidly becoming.

Chiang Seeks Alliance With Great Britain

Dictator Warns Japan's Aggression Will Not Be Tolerated.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), May 11.—The foreign office today revealed that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek saw Sir Hughe Knachtbull-Hugessen, the British ambassador, during the week-end and asked him to obtain from London details of negotiations regarding China taking place in the British capital.

Chinese correspondents said the generalissimo called Sir Hughe's attention to reports in the press that Britain and Japan are about to enter an agreement which would be tantamount to dividing China into "spheres of influence"—with Japan granted a free hand for economic exploitation of North China in return for a pledge not to interfere with British trade interests in the Yangtse Valley and the south.

China's Stand.

The generalissimo warned the ambassador that China could not recognize the validity of such agreements. He also intimated that China would not consider it a friendly action if British policy should take a direction which might lead, eventually, to recognition of Japan's conquest of Manchuria.

The London conversations continued to attract major interest here and in Nanking and Chinese newspapers saw increased activity by the Japanese army as connected with them.

The Japanese military attache, Maj. Gen. Seiichi Kita, it was revealed, is in Hongkong and has been in conference with the administration of that British crown colony. From Hongkong Gen. Kita will go to Yunnan-Fu, capital of Yunnan Province, and Chengtu, capital of Szechuan Province.

Both Yunnan and Szechuan are considered key provinces in China's defense scheme and it is noteworthy that a civil war is brewing in Szechuan where Gen. Liu Wen-Hui, bandit suppression commissioner, is planning to wrest military control of the province from his uncle, Gen. Liu Hsiang, who is gravely ill.

The British are interested in Szechuan where Gen. Liu Wen-hui, with a population of more than 70,000,000 persons—adjoins Tibet where Britain long has maintained a dominant position despite Tibet's nominal allegiance to China.

Britain also is interested in Suiyuan Province, in the north, because control of the province involves control of one of the military gateways to the Yangtse Valley and to central Asia, including the approach to northern India, through Tibet.

Frederick R. Neely, chief of the information and statistics division of the Bureau of Air Commerce, yesterday resigned his position with the Government to enter commercial aviation.

He will leave the Department of Commerce on May 22 to become assistant to the manager of the aviation department of the Gulf Oil Corporation at Pittsburgh. He will be the assistant to Maj. Al Williams, former Navy racing and acrobatic pilot.

Neely, a resident of the District since he was eight years old, has been with the Bureau of Air Commerce for a little more than seven years, having organized the statistical work, and being in charge of its publications. Previously, he was general manager of the National Aeronautic Association, and before that aviation editor on a Washington paper.

His resignation had no connection with recent changes in the personnel of the Air Bureau. He has flown more than 150,000 miles in the United States and abroad.

Wage Law Delayed By Lack of Funds

Enforcement of Washington's minimum wage law was pushed further into the future yesterday when Commissioner Melvin Hazen declared "improbable" the appointment of a board before July 1.

"The appropriation for the board's administrative expenses has not been requested yet," he said, "and we will be forced to wait to make the request until we go before the Senate District Committee."

Meanwhile, Commissioner Hazen has delegated his secretary, Ralph A. Norton, to investigate the old board, which functioned from 1919 to 1923, and determine its personnel, clerical force, wages and appropriation.

Book by Mrs. Copeland Is Favorably Received

Reviewer Calls Senator's Wife Most Discreet in Her Writings About Social Life in the Capital.

The most discreet, so far, of writers about life in the Capital, is Mrs. Royal Copeland, whose first volume, "Mrs. Copeland's Guest Book," appeared yesterday. The wife of Senator Copeland—throughout her book she calls him "the Doctor"—mentions virtually no names at all, and when she occasionally indulges in personal references, her remarks are always complimentary.

Although scandal mongers and spice hunters will be disappointed, the baffled hostess who doesn't know whether an ambassador ranks a Chief Justice, and the Congressman's wife who wants to know the proper days "at home," will find Mrs. Copeland's book a great help. A Washington hostess since 1922, she knows all the ins and outs of the protocol maze.

Mrs. Copeland not only tells one how to be a good host, but also gives tips on how to become the ideal guest. The proper clothes to take on a visit and the correct gift are some of the things she touches upon in this chapter, not omitting a plea to prospective guests not to take their dogs a-visiting, and a warning against performing parlor tricks at parties.

Several amusing incidents in the life of a Capital hostess are recounted in the book. The author tells of the dinner for which she had ordered 600 red carnations, when a friend from out-of-town arrived bringing 400 more by airplane, all of which were used to decorate the table. Senator Copeland has long been noted for wearing one of these flowers in his buttonhole, but few people have known why. The reason, as explained in the "Guest Book," is: "The day after we became engaged, the doctor presented me with an armful of red carnations, because, he said, they were his favorite flower. And I am just sentimental enough to have made them mine for all the years since."

Newcomers who have been startled by Capital etiquette will enjoy the story Mrs. Copeland tells of one of the first dinners she attended here. She had been advised not to leave until Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French Ambassador, departed, but Mrs. Copeland's mentor assured her the latter would leave at 10:30, as was the custom of ranking guests. Sure enough, promptly at the appointed time Mme. Jusserand got up to go, even breaking off in the middle of a sentence to do so.

Another book that will be read by many Washingtonians is "The Woodrow Wilsons," by Eleanor Wilson McAdoo. Appearing recently in book form, this volume describes the life of the war President and his family from his Princeton days until his death. It would seem Washington society in many respects hasn't changed so much since the time a President's daughter went to a dinner and forgot she was supposed to make the first move to depart and sat and sat until the play the guests were to see was almost over. Colossal receptions at the White House get their share of attention in the section on Capital society, too. The author frankly admits she was bored stiff at most of them.

And while books about Washington are being discussed, a forthcoming one by another official hostess deserves mention, even though it won't be published for a month. Entitled "Capital Kaleidoscope" and written by prolific Francis Parkinson Keyes, it deals with the social phase of Washington from the time the author first visited the White House during President Harrison's administration up to the present. The wife of a former Senator, and a widely known hostess for many years, Mrs. Keyes should know whereof she writes. Her book, which she describes as "very short," is to be published in part in a national magazine late this month. It will come out in volume form early in June.

Admiral, Mme. Sable Plan Cocktail Party Thursday Before Sailing for Tunisia

The retiring Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable will entertain at a small cocktail party Thursday afternoon at their home in Georgetown. They are sailing May 18 on the Normandie to spend a few weeks before going to Tunisia, Admiral Sable's new post.

Yesterday Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry gave an informal farewell tea for the Sables, who are neighbors of theirs. The Misses Howry have an old house at 3304 O street which they have remodeled. In the back is a wide veranda overlooking a garden, where the guests gathered to admire the iris, tulips and apple trees now in full bloom.

Among the guests were several colleagues of Admiral and Mme. Sable from the French Embassy, including the First Secretary, Mr. Roger Gaucheron, with his sister, Mlle. Simone Gaucheron. Others present included Mrs. George Berry, wife of the newly appointed Senator from Tennessee, recently named to succeed the late Senator Bachman; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, and Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin Rhett, who also live in Georgetown.

Among those present were Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, of Germany; Rear Admiral Louis Sable, of France; Commander Kanzo Miura and Lieut. Comdr. Tsuneo Shiki, of Japan; Lieut. Comdr. Paul Reis, of Brazil; Capt. F. C. Bradley, of Great Britain; Capt. Don Umberto Cugia, of Italy; Capt. Nikolai Bolotnikov, of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; Capt. Juan Althaus, of Peru; Capt. Saba Sueyro, of Argentina, and Rear Admiral Ralston Holmes, Capt. Allan S. Farquhar, Lieut. Comdr. Ralph Alexander, of the United States Navy, and Lieut. Col. Maurice Holmes, United States Marine Corps.

The Ambassador of Italy and Signora de Suvich are at the Claridge in Atlantic City, accompanied by their daughters, Fabrizia and Margherita, and the Ambassador's sister, Signorina Giunia de Suvich. The Ambassador will leave today to spend a few days in New York, and at the end of the week will return with his family to Washington.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castilla Najera, who returned to Washington Sunday from a brief visit to his homeland, will leave Saturday or Sunday for Dallas for the Texas Pan-American Exposition and Foreign Trade Week.

Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, will return on Thursday from a brief stay in New York. On Friday evening the Minister will entertain at a dinner for members of the Canadian Seniors Golf Association, who are coming here for a tournament at the Burning Tree Club.

Miss Wolfenden Will Wed in June

Mrs. A. Robertson Wolfenden has announced the engagement of her daughter, Jeanette Taylor, of Philadelphia and Washington, to Mr. Herbert Grenfell MacPherson, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Wolfenden is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. MacPherson, who is the son of Mrs. Duncan MacPherson, of Riverside, Calif., was graduated from the University of California, where he received his bachelor's degre in 1932 and his Ph. D. in 1936.

Joins Embassy Staff.

Mr. Frank Keith Officer, newly appointed Australian Counselor of the British Embassy, has arrived in Washington and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Mallet, of the embassy staff.

Admiral, Mrs. Stitt Are on Honeymoon

At a quiet ceremony in the North Minster Presbyterian Church in Baltimore the marriage of Mrs. James Thornwell Newton and Rear Admiral Edward Rhodes Stitt, former Surgeon General of the Navy, took place on May 3, with Dr. Arthur Welles officiating.

Admiral and Mrs. Stitt are now at Atlantic City and upon their return will make their home at 1625 R street.

My, that's a lovely gown you're wearing, Ethel!
Thanks, Ruth. It's one of Breslau's—they have so many beautiful ones it was hard to make a selection.
I'm afraid it's too expensive for me.
Expensive? Why this gown only cost me $10.95.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

Helen Lebby, petite person from the Carolinas, has arrived in Washington for a short stay. Helen can't be more than 4 feet something, and has large, sparkling brown eyes. At her first party here the other evening the subject of proper time to get home in the evening came up for discussion said Helen, "Well, down home, 4 o'clock is considered all right——"

Here she was interrupted by Lyle O'Rourke, her escort. "Well, we can arrange that easily enough," he assured her.

Helen, virtually overcome by this suggestion, hastened to reply, "No, I didn't mean that at all. I meant that up until 4 a. m. there are no frowns, so to speak. But that's a lot two late for me, anyway."

Maria Milne Whitehurst, who has just returned from a visit to Charleston, where Helen saw that her guest had a time to write home about, is in turn entertaining at a cocktail party this afternoon in honor of Helen.

Brereton Sturdevant, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Charles L. Sturdevant, is one of those brilliant youngsters. She has received nothing but A's ever since she started to school. After graduating from Wellesley, where she will go after leaving Holton Arms, she plans to be a chemist. When you hear things like this about a young girl, you immediately visualize some one who pulls her hair back into a tight knot and wears very thick glasses but not so with this young lady, who is very chic, petite and full of fun.

As far as favorite songs and melodies are concerned the trend seems to be Westward Ho! The other evening at the Shoreham Ida Clark, the accordianist who makes the rounds playing people's requests, played almost every Western song on record, just to please Senator Tom Connally and Representative Richard Kleberg, both of Texas. Finally her rendition of Graucho Grandi had its effect on Mr. Kleberg. He burst forth in song.

Isabel Farrington gave her guests a rare treat the other evening when she had them in for an evening of music and presented Kay Hudson, a slip of a girl, who is slim and not quite 5 feet tall. As one guest said, "Even though she's tiny, she sounds like a choir of angels when she starts singing."

Kay, who hails from San Diego, is studying under Mary Jordan and all who have heard her sing predict she'll be making the Met, some of these days.

Miss Simonds Will Wed in June

Among recent engagement announcements of special interest in Army circles here is that of Miss Marjorie Simonds to Lieut. William F. Ryan, of Schofield Barracks, Territory of Hawaii.

Miss Simonds made her home in Washington with her parents when Gen. Simonds was stationed at the Army War College and later when he served as deputy chief of staff before going to San Francisco, where he is now commanding general of the Ninth Corps Area.

The wedding will take place June 16 at the Presidio of San Francisco. Miss Simonds will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Normando A. Costello, and the two bridesmaids will be Miss Jean Kingman, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John Kingman, formerly of Washington, and Miss Betty Harvey, whose parents, Col. and Mrs. Charles G. Harvey, recently announced her engagement to Mr. John F. Condon, of San Francisco.

Col. and Mrs. Harvey made their home here prior to going to San Francisco, where Col. Harvey is now on duty at Fort Mason. The wedding of Miss Harvey and Col. Condon will take place in the early fall.

Janet Richards Speaks.

Miss Janet Richards gave her annual talk last evening before the Women's City Club, speaking on "Around the World in 80 Minutes." In this, her last current events lecture of the season, Miss Richards outlined political happenings throughout the world from the beginning of 1936 until today.

Good Riding Features Foxcroft Horse Show

Fine Weather Marks Annual Affair, Attended by Many Washingtonians; Miss Noland Is Hostess at Luncheon and Dinner.

A may sun shining brilliantly on the green, together with excellent horsemanship, marked the annual horse show of the Foxcroft School yesterday at the school ring near Middleburg, Va. A large crowd of sports lovers, many of whom were parents of the exhibitors, attended.

The majority of the classes of the show were for the young students and skilled riding was seen as the girls put their mounts over difficult jumps and through intricate tricks.

Miss Charlotte Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft, entertained the parents of seniors at a luncheon during the midday recess. The long luncheon table in the garden of the school was decorated with large vases of tulips and other spring flowers. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Smith, of Baltimore, brother-in-law and sister of the hostess; Mrs. Plunkett Stewart, of Uniontown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Fay Ingalls, of Hot Springs, Va.; Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, of Washington, in a Copenhagen sports frock and felt hat; Mrs. D. C. Sands, of Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, of Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sheppard, of Washington; Mrs. Charles Dana, of New York; Mrs. Samuel S. Beach, of this city; Mr. Bayard Inkeman, of Boston, and Mr. J. Child.

Others seen were Mrs. John Newell, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mueller, of Baltimore; Miss Bacon, of Washington, and Dr. John Catherine Jackson, Miss Virginia McCreery, of Greenwich, Conn.

Last evening Miss Noland was hostess at a dinner, following which there was a tryout of the pageant which will be given at Foxcroft May 20 for the benefit of the Garden Clubs of Virginia.

Embassy Aides To Greet New German Envoy

Two Members of Staff Will Go to New York to Meet Dr. Dieckhoff.

The Counselor of the German Embassy, Herr Hans Thomsen, and the Third Secretary, Herr Herbert Blankenhorn, will go to New York on Thursday to meet the new ambassador, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, who is arriving that day from Europe. On his arrival in Washington, Dr. Dieckhoff will be at the embassy for a week or so before going to Warrenton, where he has leased the home of Mr. Oscar T. Crosby, for the summer.

Mr. Crosby and his daughters, Mrs. Crosby Miller and Mrs. Crosby Hornblow, will sail on the Excambion June 8 from New York. They will go first to Naples to join Mr. Crosby's son-in-law and other daughter, Count and Countess Mario Caracciola de Melito at their home there. Count Caracciola is a member of the Italian Diplomatic Corps.

Mr. Crosby will then go to Russia, which he hasn't visited since 1903. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Hornblow will travel in Europe while he is there, and they will return to this country next fall. Mrs. Hornblow's young son, Terry, will visit his father, Mr. Arthur Hornblow, and his stepmother, Myrna Loy, in Hollywood, during the Crosby's absence.

Mr. Crosby had made many trips to out-of-the-way places. Last year he and Mrs. Miller sailed down the east coast of Africa to Dar-Es-Salaam in Tanganyika, then went into the interior. Their Warrenton home boasts a collection of weapons from Africa, many of them acquired on Mr. Crosby's first trip there in 1900. At that time he crossed Ethiopia to the headwaters of the Blue Nile. Then he descended the gorge of the river, almost a mile deep, crossed it, and made the difficult ascent to the other side. During this trip he was presented to Menelik II, then monarch of Ethiopia and uncle of the ill-fated Haile Selassie.

Miss Schneider, Frank F. Allen Married Here

Miss Elizabeth Gaede Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Schneider, of 2401 Calvert street, was married at 7:30 o'clock last evening to Mr. Frank Fenlason Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Allen, of Bangor, Me., and Washington. The ceremony took place at the Congressional Country Club, the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce officiating, before an altar banked with palms, ferns, lilacs and lilies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown made with a net yoke trimmed with bands of satin. Her tulle veil was held in place with orange blossoms and she carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Marie Gaede, cousin of the bride, served as her maid of honor and only attendant. She wore rose chiffon and carried lavender lilacs. Mr. Francis Dickey Allen was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Mr. James Marsh, Mr. James Heaton, Mr. Carl Gaede, another cousin of the bride, and Mr. George Nowell.

A reception at the club followed the ceremony. Mrs. Schneider wore a gray net gown and a corsage of lavender orchids. The bridegroom's mother chose for the occasion a flowered brocade, with which she wore green orchids.

Among the guests were Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Representative and Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gaede, and Mrs. Robert Gaede, grandmother of the bride.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Allen will live at 2401 Calvert street. Mrs. Allen attended Madeira School and Gunston Hall, and Mr. Allen is a graduate of Deerfield Academy and Bowdoin College.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Can't Forget Man She Met Once Years Ago; Asks How to Bring About Second Meeting.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Though I live 3,000 miles from Washington, I hope you will help me with my problem. Several years ago I met a gentleman whom I very much admired and who at the time gave me reason to believe he, too, was favorably impressed. He took me home that evening from the day's outing and asked permission to call me the next evening and I consented happily. (He, by the way, is about 40 and I am 32.)

* * * *

However, he did not call and I never heard from him, to my great disappointment at the time, but I have never forgotten him. At that one and only meeting his mother, too, was in the party and upon taking us home she was very much amused with her son when he suggested dropping her first. She won—I was dropped first.

* * * *

The man is still unmarried and I still long for an opportunity to know him but there is absolutely no way of bringing about our meeting other than through my own initiative. I live alone, having no family. He lives with his mother.

Would it be wrong if I were to write him a note in an effort to see him again? Music is a common interest and I often receive complimentary tickets to recitals and concerts. Would it be considered bad form if I were to invite him to be my guest at a concert, and how should such an invitation be worded? Hopefully and eagerly waiting your advice, I am sincerely, SAN FRANCISCAN.

DEAR SAN FRANCISCAN—Your impulse to invite the man to concert or recital is a happy thought—if only it had occurred to you within a week or a fortnight of that first meeting. Then it might easily have masqueraded as a casual kindness prompted by the knowledge of your mutual interest in music. Now, however, you have less ground to stand on in taking the initiative to bring about a second meeting. It's just possible the man has completely forgotten you, and equally possible that his mother is determined he shall dance attendance on no woman but her.

Still, you may as well take a chance. Where was it you met the man? Why not repeat that day's outing by going to the same place and doing more or less the same things, and promptly thereafter mail your note, writing on the premises that a journey over the same route recalled him—and the pleasant time you had with him that day several years ago—to your mind.

* * * *

You might say: "Dear Mr. Smith: I wonder if you remember me—Mary Jones? We met three years ago at Blanks Beach, on a gloriously sunshiny Sunday afternoon, and afterward you and your mother drove me home. We were to meet again but for some reason never did. I wonder now why we never did—for I was there again last Sunday, for the first time since that day, and it brought you and the grand time we had vividly back to memory. I even remember we spoke about music and found we had the same passion for Bach—which brings me to the point of my story.

* * * *

"I have tickets for a concert at Doe's Hall a week from tomorrow evening—the program is to include so-and-so—and I am wondering if you would care to come. Your theories about music, as I remember, were absolutely in accord with my own, and it would make the evening a double treat if I could hear and rehash the program with you. Do come, if you possibly can, and, in any event, let me know not later than Saturday.

Cordially, MARY JONES."

Love-Making Nauseates.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My parents were divorced three years ago as a result of several affairs my father had had with other women. Although I knew that everything had not been as it should be, the revelation of my father's conduct was quite a shock. Of course, I could see both sides of the question, but, nevertheless, I could in no way excuse him.

* * * *

Unfortunately at this same time I was having my first real "crush." The boy seemed to feel the same way about me, but accidentally I discovered that he thought the whole affair "a cute joke." These two incidents combined to prejudice me so that I really don't enjoy going out with young men. I have no brothers and my father and I have never been really good companions, so my viewpoint is entirely feminine and always has been, more or less.

* * * *

My feelings are now at the point where it actually nauseates me to have a boy so much as hold my hand. I realize this is an unnatural and unhealthy attitude. I have really tried to make friends with several young men I know. They all seem to like me but are puzzled by my attitude and usually consider it a personal affront. Somehow, I cannot bring myself to take part in even mild "petting" and the "not now" attitude seems not to succeed in Washington.

* * * *

I am 18 and am going to school here. My home is quite a distance from Washington. I have always been extremely serious minded and overly sensitive, and it is quite likley that I have exaggerated a little in stating my problem. However, I believe that my attitude is shared by other children of divorced parents, and perhaps you can enlighten them as well as me. May I thank you sincerely for any advice you may give me? I have enjoyed reading your column for several years. DAILY READER.

The Wholesome Attitude.

DEAR DAILY READER: Cheer up. You're not half as badly off as you may think. Since 23 is approximately the right age for a girl to begin thinking seriously of love and marriage, you have five years ahead in which to recover from your emotional bruising. As a matter of fact, the shock may serve a very good purpose in teaching a certain wholesome distrust and dislike of the casually philandering type of man. At least, you now have your eyes open to the truth that not all men are saints and half-gods, and you can begin to look for a man who is all that the name of man should imply.

* * * *

Don't try to fight down that nausea which overtakes you at the prospect of hand-holding and petting. Tell the boys candidly that you're not a hand holder and not a petter, and if they wish to know why, tell them that just now you don't like men particularly and certainly don't trust the majority of them. After all, it's as good a line as any other and probably the more effective for being true. Any man—or boy— likes a girl the more for her refusing to fall on his neck at the first invitation, providing only she gives him some objective reason for the rejection; one that cannot be construed—except by the selfish, petty, ignorant and potentially domineering—as a purely personal reflection. Any really fine boy would immediately accept your attitude, very probably would inquire gently into the cause, and might in compassionate indignation generously extend himself to restore your faith in men.

* * * *

The fact that you have been able to diagnose, so honestly and accurately, the reason for your current antipathy to men and lovemaking, shows you have the intelligent common sense and stamina to survive the shocks. Divorce does not necesarily disable the children thereof for wholesome, constructive living, unless they come of a weak breed which cannot deal honestly and courageously with reality. Though your father was weak, your mother may have been strong in character and mentality and finally decided no purpose was to be served in longer enduring what could not be cured.

* * * *

You might be helped in overcoming your prejudices against men and male parents through associating with girls whose parents dwell together in mutual loyal respect, affection and harmony, and with girls who have nice brothers, and with girls who possess that casual, unquestioning trust in all men which you have temporarily lost. Don't feel sorry for yourself; don't feel it your bounden duty, as a so-called "child of divorce," to adopt a dramatic attitude of cynicism; don't probe your wounds too morbidly. Remember that time and Nature heal most hurts in the normally healthy individual. Have faith in the inherent decency—and the capacity for enduring, ennobling love—of well brought up persons of good stock. Concentrate on winning the friendship, respect and affecton of such persons; avoid all cheaper, offensive associates, and you will one day, I have no doubt, find yourself gloriously, completely and self-forgetfully in love with a boy who deserves your very best. M. H.

Store Window Should Tell Fashion Story

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, May 10.—"Store windows should either tell a fashion story, a color story, or merely be cleverly amusing," says Helen Coles, display director of Bonwit Teller. Not only has Mrs. Coles invaded a profession usually regarded as a man's field, but her unique and dramatic window themes are being discussed throughout the country.

In planning windows Mrs. Coles has no set of rules, the approach being dictated entirely by the type of window under consideration. "At the moment, I feel that the most successful type of display and the most entertaining, is the one that dramatizes through the more fanciful and the abstract, as opposed to the direct suggestion," she said. "However, in order to keep up enthusiasm and freshness, it seems necessary to have an open mind—consequently, my theory of display changes frequently."

"Windows," explained Mrs. Coles with emphasis, "must not be embroidered on the store front, like trimming. They have to be part of the entire store's merchandising and promotional theme. I do not think any single window or series of windows, however, should be created with the main idea of selling merchandise—they should be built to be beautiful, exciting and arresting. Then, they will automatically be selling windows—this fact has been proved numerous times." Window display persons, Mrs. Coles contends, above all else, must remain flexible—they must be willing to put aside a pet idea (and they become very "pet" at times), for a better one, for windows have more significance than the public realizes, she pointed out.

Like Writing Books.

"Which comes first, the idea or the merchandise, when creating window displays," we asked. "That, seems to me, to depend upon how engaging and timely the idea is," Mrs. Coles explained. Planning of window displays is similar to that of writing a book, she believes. "Perhaps the main character is so enchanting that a whole series of dramatic circumstances are built about her or him; and again, sometimes the author begins with the plot and creates a character to harmonize. The same is true in creating windows," she said, "but in windows, whether consciously or unconsciously, the merchandise ultimately must be the heroine."

"But specifically where do your ideas come from," we urged. "From everywhere," she replied, "at the theater enjoying new and dramatic effects; sitting in a smart bar and admiring glasses made cool and beautiful through skillful indirect lighting; from my four youngsters with their fresh little minds and amusing comments." In regard to lighting, Mr. Coles feels that spotlights are necessary, inasmuch as they make it possible to focus the attention of the passing sidewalk audience. "I see all passersby as a curious and interested audience," she said, "and I am trying to put on a good show for their entertainment. This is why, I believe in a series of windows rather than a single and separate story in each window. It is important to have a progression of thought from window to window, so that there is an impulse to go back and start looking all over again."

The window mannikin is of the utmost importance, Mrs. Coles believes. "It has been our policy to develop mannikins of the mode," she said, "figures which have the expression and feeling of the women of current times; we echo this idea in our advertising. Window mannikins and figures illustrating fashion copy, should look like real people, and not grotesque cartoons, or the like." Citing several instances of very successful windows, Mrs. Coles discussed briefly the amusing "surrealist" windows, the "louvre" windows (beautiful in their all-white classic simplicity and feeling), and the "horoscope" windows, which gave suggestions in choosing clothes, according to your birth date. "I work mostly on impulse plus timely ideas," said this amazing window artist. "I never plan my windows weeks or months in advance. That would spoil the fun of creating dramatic and original effects, and make a burden of something which I find is immensely interesting and entertaining."

Clothes Critic In Poor Form If Unsolicited

Compliments Always Acceptable, but Adverse Comment Never Justified.

By Margaret Wallace.

ONE TYPE of transgressor against good form is the person who makes adverse comments about the clothes her friends are wearing. Compliments about clothes are always acceptable, of course, but criticism is never justified unless specifically requested. One girl who is sensitive about her clothes and personal appearance has written as follows concerning this problem:

"Every time I come into the office where I am employed the girls there comment on my clothes. One will say, 'I like you on a smaller hat;' another, 'You look so much better today than you did yesterday in that red dress. You know you should never wear red, it makes you look too fat.'

"When I protest about such remarks the girls laugh and say they are merely being honest and ask if I should like for them to lie to me. An older woman in the office has a much better attitude for she sometimes says to me, 'You look nice in blue' and lets it end there. Perhaps she, too, thinks I look fat in my red dress, but she does not say so. I have asked her advice several times in making my selection of clothes, and she has always been very frank in telling me what she thought would be becoming to me and what she thought did not. I was grateful to her, and my feelings were not a bit hurt."

People who comment on another person's clothes and qualify compliments with uninvited advice and criticism are, of course, very rude. They are on an equal with the boys and girls whose parents are able to provide them with nice clothes who laugh and point and make fun of the shabby clothes and worn shoes of less fortunate boys and girls.

QUERY: I have been married only a few weeks and have come to Washington with my husband from another city. I have a very nice trousseau, part of which was purchased in Washington. My mother-in-law and, in fact, all members of my husband's family have made remarks on every costume I wear. They advise me to have my hair waved in another way. When my sisters-in-law invite me to luncheon to meet their friends they always say "don't wear that blue suit or that black dress." Recently they insisted that I change from a white dress to a more quiet one when we were going out to dinner because they said it was too dressed-up for the occasion. I found that I was not "dressed-up" enough. My mother thinks that my "new in-laws" are very rude. They even correct my way of speaking and the things I do. I want to get along with them and would not mind it if they did not make the comments on my appearance before the whole family and even strangers. Do you think I am unduly sensitive and that they are really not as rude as I think they are?

The answer to this query is that the "new in-laws" of this girl are very rude. People in every community have different ideas of dressing for different functions.

If the family thought it necessary, in order to assist the young bride to adjust herself to her new environment, to suggest that people in Washington wear certain types of costumes for certain functions here.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Roughage in Foods.

WE DISCUSSED yesterday some recent research in the subject of constipation, in which different kinds of food produces were isolated and studied on patients as to their effect on sluggish bowels. Only one kind of food was given at a time, so that the results were not contaminated by mixed factors.

Today we want to consider the subject of roughage. Roughage is the indigestible part of food which gives the food residue bulk in the large intestine and stimulates the bowel to activity. Any part of the food that does not digest and does not suffer bacterial decomposition, or whose products are unabsorbed, contributes to the residue in the lower bowel. Some of these residues are bland and mechanically unirritating, while some are believed to act as mechanical irritants and are called roughage.

Of the bland residues it is surprising to find that eggs, especially raw eggs, milk, cheese, white bread, macaroni, potatoes and branless cereals furnish a good part.

Hurst, in England, was able to recover 5 per cent of the dry substance of meat, eggs and white bread, while he was able to recover 15 to 20 per cent of green vegetables, brown bread, carrots and turnips.

The question of what is roughage is somewhat debatable. Fiber and cellulose are usually considered to be roughage, but cellulose is really as bland as any insoluble substance could be.

The foods which furnish roughage residues as distinguished from the bland residues are bran-containing cereals, whole wheat bread, fruits and vegetables, particularly raw fruits, and salads and relishes. The structures that constitute the roughage of vegetable foods are (1) those held together by fibrous cells and the wood and fibers of stems, roots, the ribs of leaves and the interiors of fruits; (2) those protected by the cutin or cork tissue in the structures of roots, stems, leaves and fruit; (3) seeds. Owing to a mucilaginous layer in the coats, some hard seeds become soft in the digestive canal or on cooking.

The constipated person requires more than the normal amount of roughage for distention. This is because he destroys more roughage than the normal person. Cowgill and Anderson estimate that the average person requires 50 parts of roughage, while the constipated individual requires comparatively 90 parts of roughage per pound of body weight. There is a type of constipation, however, in which the digestive canal is so sensitive that the patient cannot take roughage in any form.

Editor's note—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

Short Coats Displayed For Afternoon Wear

Paris, (U.P.)—For afternoon wear, Molyneux shows short coats with full, loose backs which fall below the hips. They are trimmed with fur—usually fox—either at the edge of the three-quarter length sleeves or at the full hem. These coats are worn with crepe dress of the same shade. Gray beige, slate blue and grege are the most popular shades.

Evening clothes are formal, due to the influence of the coronation. There are many lames in gold and silver. These are frequently beaded with sequins as well.

Luise Rainer Picks Her Outfit for Fall

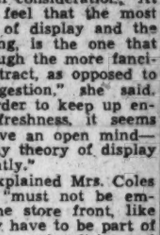
Luise Rainer, movie actress, admits she may be rushing the season, but she already has chosen an outfit for early fall.

The suit combines grey broadcloth with krimmer, and features a krimmer bolero with broadcloth sleeves. This same fur is used to create a smart, standing collar, and a Cossack type hat.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

KATHARINE CORNELL is constantly amazing and indefatigable. Now engaged in a very brief tour with "Candida" and "The Wingless Victory," this brilliant star is plotting the most astonishing exploit ever planned by a native player. She intends, if all goes well, to play the hits of her repertory all the way around the world!



ALICE HUGHES.

I taxed her with this fantasy just before she took off from our musty Empire Theater on her current bit of barnstorming. And she said it was quite true, and mat plans are already being made with this in view.

"I'm 39 now," she told me. "Every February 16 I get a year older. I suppose now I am at the height of my physical and acting powers. I love to troupe. And why not around the world—since I've played most of the nooks and crannies of this country?".

If she goes, she says, she will take with her a company of 50, and the scenery for such of her plays as "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Romeo and Juliet," "St. Joan" and one or two more. Thus it may well be that a year or two hence the sahibs of Singapore will be weeping at her lovely portrait of Elizabeth Barrett, and the citizens of Sidney, Australia, will hear her asking Romeo wherefore in the dickens is he Romeo, anyway! It is a theatrical stunt of unsurpassed interest and magnitude—and our Kate's the girl to do it!

What a woman! Ask her about clothes and she'll tell you she knows all about them—you wear warm ones in winter and cool ones in summer. And Cairo may yet see her in the armor of Joan of Domremy! Limitless in drive and ambition, Cornell will have more than a page in our day's history books!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Noel Coward was back in town tanned by the Bermuda sun with his larynx again in excellent trim, and sailed right away to be on hand when his majesty gets the crown—tomorrow, isn't it? Null was affably noncommittal on the current success of his memoirs, "Present Indicative." Smart lad, too—he chopped them off with the success of "Cavalcade," and so will have a nice chunk to go on when he next takes up the pen as a tottering old gaffer of 45.

* * * *

My favorite Dream Girl, Mrs. Gov. Herbert Lehman, of our State, just celebrated a pleasant anniversary—27 years ago she was married to His Excellency. They luncheod together from trays on his big, flat desk in the capitol at Albany!

* * * *

There was a near mutiny—rebellion, stand-up and sit-down—on the campus of fair Barnard College the other afternoon when signs were posted around the fem sem forbidding the coeds to puff coffin-nails near the lecture buildings! "History is turned backward!" screamed the campus radicals! But the faculty said it was not a moral issue, but merely a lack of fire-proofing, so classes went on with their usual spring torpor!

* * * *

The season has come and gone and the society cuties will soon be dispersing to dear old Newport, but most of the year's glamour girls are still romantically unattached. Dozens of beaux, but no white hot moments. Gloria Baker, probably the outstanding peach of the crop, has been seen with a half-dozen young men, but no society gossip can catch a strain from "Lohengrin" on the spring air. All of which is most heartbreaking to the semiprofessional cupids of the village! . . .

* * * *

Remember the dear old humdrum days of the pastel undies and nighties? They seem to be gone with the Windsor. At any rate, a local shop showed a collection of the most colorful under things ever to face these bloodshot eyes—bright coronation colors that could probably be seen right through a street dress on a sunny day! My goodness! And the new nighties still can double as evening gowns. In fact, one I saw was adopted from a Jeanette MacDonald frock in "Maytime." I declare I don't know what we're coming to—and I'm glad of it!

CHILD CHATS

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE MINDS of many people might be likened to a series of locked compartments very much like rows of mailboxes. In one they keep art, in another politics, a third contains literature, a fourth history and so on. Never are the contents of one container allowed to mingle with the contents of the other. Most of them are hermetically sealed after school or college is over, and never referred to again.

This system starts in childhood. Tommy is amazed at learning in the history course a fact which he had carefully placed in the compartment labeled "art." He never had realized that art took place in the course of history. At this moment of revelation, someone should persuade Tommy to open all the locked boxes of his mind and relate their contents to each other. But in the crowded school schedule there are many specialists, teachers of art, science, mathematics, whose job it is to poke their subjects into the pupils. No one has time to fit the subjects together.

Mary complains that her examination was unfair, since one of the questions was on the work of the previous term. What has been put into a locked box of the brain is through with. Once learned, labeled and pigeon-holed, it has no further use.

If the school has not the time to make of education a co-ordinated and continuing process, the home will have to undertake the task. The chief difficulty is that the parents were brought up by the same system, and look upon their education as something passed.

If they would open their minds, furbish up the contents, read and discuss with their children the subjects which the schools are teaching, they could supplement the school training and assure their children a real education.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

BOYKIN-7

OUR NEIGHBOR down the street takes it entirely for granted. As if all husbands were like hers, not only so devoted but attentive and considerate every day as well as Sundays. And she has a little boy into the bargain who copies his father in this as in other things. So the lady in the case has two men dancing attendance on her and thinking she's just wonderful.

That's an easy way for a woman to get spoiled and terribly cocky, but we haven't found this one to be, mainly perhaps because she does think it's the usual lot of woman. And our personal observations has been that she's more right than wrong. In spite of the news headlines and comics and popular novels to the contrary. Most women are queens in their own homes, with husbands who split themselves to provide pleasantly—but they're not news so we don't read about them.

Our lady down the street does her part, too. No sitting back letting her man fetch and carry for her. She makes a perfectly charming home for them, and quite a masculine sort of place, too, since they're in the majority.

The minute you enter the front hall, you know that men live there. Yet it's as smart as a redingote for spring and just as appealing to both masculine and feminine taste. In the first place the hall floor is linoleum in a nice golf suit shade of brown—a practical floor covering that won't keep the men folks feeling guilty about tracking in from wherever they've been. The walls are in a deep warm shade of beige and there are two Chippendale arm chairs, substantial and spacious as well as handsome, and these have Delft blue leather seats. The blue is repeated again in the linings of the built-in book shelves and in the pottery lamp base that stands on a mahogany console table above which hangs a good-looking electric clock for keeping watches on the dot. (Wouldn't the men in your family approve of that in the hall!)

A slightly old fashioned note but decorative and very much used is a porcelain umbrella stand, also with a lot of blue in it. A hall closet has individual shelves for rubbers and galoshes and racks for ball bats and golf clubs, along with coat hangers and hat racks. And this closet isn't bulging with all sorts of practically never used odds and ends.

Before putting fresh-cut flowers in a vase, cut the stems under water and leave under water for one-half hour. Flowers so treated will keep fresh much longer.

Mending Hint.

If your small daughter tears a jagged hole in her new print dress, and it is impossible to mend it neatly, take a plain material of harmonizing color and apply a butterfly over the tear. It will hide the mended place and make the dress prettier.

The first time I drove an automobile back in the hills, my Cousin Dillard asked me to show him how to run the thing, so I got him in the car and we started down the road and my Cousin Dillard says, "Well, I saw how you started the thing, but how do you stop it?" So I says, "Well, I'll show you."

So I stepped on the brakes and the road happened to be slippery and the car skidded and crashed into a rock wall at the side of the road. We untangled ourselves from the wreckage and my Cousin Dillard says, "Well, you sure stopped her all right, but how in the world do you stop the thing when they ain't no rock wall handy?"

Medal

From mines to medals is the record of Charles Willers Briggs, of the United States Naval Research Laboratory at Anacostia, just awarded the William H. McFadden Medal by the American Foundrymen's Association.

After graduating from Stanford, he served as a miner, underground, in Arizona, later going back to Stanford as a laboratory assistant. In 1930 he entered the Naval Laboratory, was advanced to assistant physicist and later appointed physical metallurgist in charge of the steel castings section, foundry and research counsultant to the Navy Department on steel castings and gamma ray radiography. Not content with such technical titles, he wrote papers on "Detecting Defects by Radiography, Using Gamma Rays," "Studies on Solidification and Contraction and Their Relations to the Formation of Hot Tears in Steel Castings."

Golf

The Federal Golf Association—it formerly called itself the Interdepartmental Golf League—announces its annual golf tournament this year will be on Monday and Tuesday, June 7 and 8, at the Indian Spring Club. Four-man teams, divided into three classes, will compete; class A teams restricted to golfers with handicaps of 12 or less, class B, 13 to 17, and class C, 18 to 24. The tournament will be played on a basis of 36 holes, medal play, with handicap allowances.

Play is for two days to care for a large number of entries. Trophies will be awarded for the individual low gross, representing the Government Service Championship; team championships, both for low gross and low net scores; also individual low net prizes for each class.

The new association was formed expressly to recognize all Federal and District government employes—the old Interdepartmental Golf League, the association was confined largely to older, established Federal departments—and a larger and more representative tournament is the goal. The winner will be entitled to recognition as the Government service champion, but the competition will be keen. Some of the better players in Washington are in the Government, such as Roger Peacock, Tommy Webb, John R. Miller, Everett Johnson and Paul Carey. Last year's winner, Tommy Webb, who captured the tournament at Beaver Dam, is expected to defend his title.

Notes

The itinerary of the cadet cruise of the United States Coast Guard has been announced by Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, the commandant . . . Seventy-two cadets will board the cutters George W. Campbell and Cayuga at New London, Conn., on June 5, setting sail for the Mediterranean . . . The itinerary includes Marseilles, Venice, Yugoslavia, Greece, Algiers and New London again on August 5 . . . Anyone who is more than 20, less than 48, and was repairing watches back in 1932, can ask for a job at the Navy Yard, the Civil Service Commission says. The man who gets the job will have to apply before May 19 at the Labor Board, Washington Navy Yard . . . The Navy Yard is in the news from another angle; Columbia Lodge, No. 174, International Association of Machinists, protests against recent discharges in the mechanical sections of the Navy Department, saying it demonstrates "that the employes have neither collective bargaining nor security of employment." . . . Government employes from California last night were guests of Representative John H. Tolan from the Seventh California District at that State's Democratic Club's meeting. Included in the discussions were talks by C. T. BureauAsked To Liquidate Crime Data

Bill Asks Clearing House for Department of Justice Here.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Calling attention of the House of Representatives to the Washington Criminal Justice Association's first report, Representative Alfred N. Phillips, jr., (Democrat), of Connecticut, yesterday introduced legislation to establish a "crime liquidation bureau" at the Department of Justice.

And at the same time, it was learned that approximately 10 per cent of criminal offenders admitted to probation in District court are re-arrested for other crimes during their probationary period.

Lack of adequate personnel in the court probation office was blamed for apparent failures to keep an accurate check on activities of the probationers.

Phillips, after citing local crime facts as revealed in the criminal justice report, said similar conditions exist in principal cities throughout the country. Major felonies, he declared, are not being solved and felons are not being brought to justice.

Police Held Handicapped.

Police, said Phillips, are handicapped by inadequate personnel and lack of funds. They are not equipped, he added, to track down criminals after offenses have escaped punishment more than 90 days.

Under provisions of his bill, Phillips told the House, all reported felonies would be referred to the 'crime liquidation bureau" if they were not solved at the end of 90 days.

After a reasonable length of time and the fugitive criminal has escaped apprehension, said Phillips, it can be assumed that he has crossed a State line. This brings his offense directly to the Department of Justice.

All police departments, the bill provides, will be required to report unsolved crimes to the "crime liquidation bureau" within the prescribed time. It will then become a duty of Federal officers to work with local police.

Referred to Committee.

Phillips' measure was referred to the House Judiciary Committee.

In the District Court probation office there is a chief officer and four assistants. During the last fiscal year 866 cases were referred for probation. Of this number 381 were released on condition they report once a month.

And of those released, 35 were again arrested and their probation revoked because of additional offenses. Records over a period of years, it was reported, show an average of 10 per cent violate probation.

It is a difficult task, court attaches point out, to control the probationer's activities during his period of conditional freedom. Repeatedly, offenders have been rearrested within a short time after probation is granted.

Already burdened with investigations and clerical work the probation officer's staff is unable to keep careful check on each individual probationer, authorities pointed out.

New Institution Needed.

In many instances, however, probation is granted in an effort to keep the accused offender from prison. These cases involve youths between 17 and 21.

Rather than send these youngsters to the Lorton Reformatory to mix with hardened prisoners, probation officers temper sympathy with justice and release them.

There is a "crying need" in the District for a separate institution to house young offenders, said one probation officer yesterday. His sentiments were supported by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Woodcock Silent On Report He Is To Quit in June

Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock has submitted his resignation as president of St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., it was reported yesterday, because he feels the institution should be coeducational and the board of the college does not agree.

Gen. Woodcock, former Federal prohibtion commissioner, has been serving as a special assistant to the United States Attorney General since he became president of St. John's.

Asked for a statement here yesterday, he said:

"I have absolutely nothing to say until the college term ends on June 9. I shall have a full statement then. Right now I'll neither confirm nor deny it."

St. John's is a small school, but one of the oldest in the country. Recently it lost its eligibility rating with the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle States, and since then the board has been making changes to regain the rating.

The Annapolis Evening Capital said that Gen. Woodcock, who became president of St. John's in 1934, had submitted his resignation effective July 1.

"Gen. Woodcock," the paper said, "feels that St. John's should become coeducational. The board of the college is said to oppose such a plan.

"It is said that Gen. Woodcock has submitted his resignation without having had any argument with the board members. Their meetings have been friendly—but their opinions differ."

Ickes to Lead Abattoir Fight; King Bill Is Up

The Planning Association Pushes Drive on 'Nuisances.'

With Secretary Harold L. Ickes of the Interior Department scheduled to lead the antiabattoir forces, hearings will open at 2 p. m. today on the King bill to control "nuisance industries" in Washington.

On the eve of the debate before a special Senate sub-committee, the American Planning and Civic Association made public the letter it has sent to all members urging them to fight establishment of any and all forms of "nuisance" plants within the District.

First Lady Interested.

Mrs. Roosevelt is a member of the association's board of directors, whose chairman is her husband's uncle, Frederic A. Delano.

Among those expected this afternoon to support passage of the King bill and its House companion introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton, are the following:

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks; the District Commissioners, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, representatives of citizens' groups and others, as well as Secretary Ickes and Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic Association.

Legal counsel for Adolf Gobel, Inc., whose receipt of a permit to build an abattoir on Benning road ignited the fight, probably will assume the brunt of opposition to the proposed legislation.

Congressmen Aid.

The anti brigade was joined yesterday by Representatives McGehee (Democrat), Mississippi; Shafer (Republican), Michigan; Short (Republican), Missouri, and Bates (Republican), Massachusetts. All expressed opposition to any movement to build slaughter houses, rendering plants or any other type of so-called nuisance industries in the National Capital.

The clarion letter dispatched by the planning association was signed by Miss James and included the reminder that "Congress is morally bound to protect its investment from depreciating influences."

"Every citizen in the United States has a stake in the Federal City," association members were informed, "for there has been a tremendous investment of Federal funds to make Washington an outstanding world capital.

"Nuisance industries should be barred from the less than 70 square miles which now constitute the Federal City."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, is chairman of the subcommittee which will conduct hearings on the bill introduced by Senator William H. King, of the Senate District Committee. The testimony will be taken in the District Committee room in the Senate wing, floor level of the Capitol.

Churches Create Welfare Branch

A new branch of its office will take over and expand the welfare work of the Washington Federation of Churches, the Rev. W. L. Darby, executive secretary, announced yesterday.

This department of social welfare will be placed under the direction of the Rev. John L. Mixon, a graduate of the University of Chicago and Chicago Theological Seminary, who will come to Washington late this month. Dr. Darby said he expected the new activities to get under way June 1.

The federation is setting up its social welfare program with the cooperation of the Community Chest and the Council of Social Agencies. Mr. Mixon will be a member of the federation's staff, but money to operate his department will be provided by the Chest.

The department will be housed in the federation's new offices at 1749 N street.

Country's Largest Small Mammal Collection Is Housed in $275,000 Building to Be Opened Soon.

Not yet open to the public, the Zoo's new small mammal house already is overrun with mice. But they are nice mice, not pests. In fact, they are on exhibition and no traps are set for them.

Of course, the Zoo has many mice behind bars which are not supposed to be on display. These are the sociable little fellows that scamper about the deer's, rhino's and other pens, stealing bits of food with amazing audacity.

There was the elderly woman who, in earshot of a keeper, turned to her companion as they stood in front of the impalla's cage one day and said:

"How on earth do they manage to keep those tiny mice in captivity when the bars are so broad?"

But the mice—and rats—previewed yesterday in their new $275,000 residence are actually Zoo specimens, as much so as the ghost wolf, Babe, the elephant and, Snowy, the polar bear. Furthermore, they turned out to be so tame and friendly that the inspector began to wonder why they are anathema to so many.

Take the silky pocket mouse. Indeed, you can take it to a Y. W. C. A. meeting without its giving cause for alarm, even if its presence probably would place a premium on table space. Smallest of all rodents in America, if not the world, it is extremely playful.

Another new accession is a family of prairie dogs, which look more like squirrels. Then there is the kangaroo rat from southern Arizona, with long hind legs and very short forelegs. It also is friendly.

There are other species of rodents galore but Ernest P. Walker, acting Zoo director, reminds that many of the so-called mice really aren't mice at all but are called that for want of a better popular name.

The small mammal collection is one of the largest and most varied in the country, acording to Walker. Scores of specimens were caught and contributed by the Biological Survey, National Park Service and Forest Service. Others, longer in captivity, were transferred from the monkey house. Still others, like the albino raccoon, have been at the Zoo for years but never before on exhibition. They were kept in the annex because of lack of space.

The building is completed and the animals have moved in and the only thing keeping the public out is the delay in passing final inspection on eonstruction by the Treasury. If a few curious folks have slipped inside, it has been strictly unofficial.

Student Group Crusade Ends; Prelate Talks

Archbishop Curley Presents Awards to Catholic Mission Winners.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 10.—At the closing business session of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade of the Baltimore diocese here today, a constitution was approved and the election of permanent officers postponed until September and Archbishop Michael J. Curley presented awards to more than a score of crusaders.

Brother Vincent, C. F. X., of Mount St. Josephs College, of Baltimore, was appointed chairman pending the election to be held in Baltimore. Miss Marcella Myers and Miss Margaret Ann Mack, both of Baltimore, were appointed corresponding and recording secretaries, respectively.

Frederick, Md., May 10.—Leo Laneva, of LaSalle Institute, of Cumberland, won first honors here tonight in the fifth annual oratorical contest of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade of the archdiocese of Baltimore. Announcement of the winner was made by Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, and awards were presented by Archbishop Michael J. Curley.

The other contestants, in the order in which they finished, were Elizabeth Fisher, St. John's High School, Westminster; Clara Costello, Notre Dame High School, Bryantown; Alma Theresa Santry, Mount St. Mary's High School, Baltimore; Margaret Mary Edmonston, Holy Trinity High School, Washington.

Judges were the Rev. Speer Strahan, of Catholic University; Mrs. Frank O'Hara and Edward J. Heffron, both of Washington. Herbert R. O'Connor, attorney general, represented Gov. Harry W. Nice, in presenting Justice Butler. Archbishop Curley and Justice Butler were guests at a dinner attended by local officials, civic leaders and prominent clergy, prior to the oratorical contest which is sponsored by the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious.

Cumberland Courthouse, Va., May 10 (AP).—Two men were killed instantly and a woman was fatally hurt in an automobile accident on the highway about six miles east of here late today.

State Policeman H. T. Ferguson, of Farmville, said the men were Andrew Jenkins, of Cumberland County, and Harry Tramler, of Washington D. C.

The Southside Hospital at Farmville, where the women died several hours later, said they were undecided as to her identity

Ferguson said the men were killed and the women fatally hurt when the sedan in which they were riding ran off the road (Route 60) up an embankment and crashed into a tree. Ferguson said Tramler was driving.

Treasury Unit Dismisses 191 In Retrenching

Services of Technical Employes Will Terminate on May 15.

Formal notice of dismissal, effective May 15, was received yesterday by approximately 191 technical employes in the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department in line with a curtailment policy expressed by the division officials on May 1.

The dismissed employes—architects, mechanical and electrical engineers and structural engineers—will have the benefit of their accrued leave. Termination of service was based on efficiency, seniority and dependencies, and all involved were placed on the preferred lists Curtailed activities in Federal building construction was given as the reason for the retrenchment.

The move brought a meeting of members of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians last week, but formal action on behalf of the threatened employes was held in abeyance until the formal notices of dismissal were distributed.

The formal notice said that the changes would not affect the permanent staff of technical employes or the temporarily employed 21 architectural engineers.

Jewelry Dealers Open Convention

Albert Sigmund, president, welcomed the delegates, and Vincent Alexander, of the Sterling Silversmiths' Guild, and Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes spoke. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen spoke on behalf of the District.

At the afternoon business session Louis Rothschild, attorney and national representative of the retailers council, spoke on the effect of recent legislation on the jewelry business.

Ukrainians Arrive Here For Conclave

National Group's Unique Convention Held First Time in Capital.

Washington's Ukrainian population, which is almost negligible, increased more than 500 per cent yesterday.

The Ukrainian National Association opened its quadrennial convention, the first one ever held in the Capital, with some 400 delegates representing 32,000 members in the United States and Canada.

Scattered in and about the Washington Hotel yesterday, little groups of nationalists presented an unusual picture to downtown passers-by. With their almost unbroken array of mustaches and their strange tongue, it was obvious that this was a different sort of convention.

And it is, though every delegate is either an American or Canadian citizen, some by birth, but most of them by naturalization. It's different, besides, because the purpose of the assembly is not to dine, go "rubbernecking" and listen to dry speeches, but to transact serious business relative to social security, relations with the homeland and education.

Membership of 32,000.

Of course, the association members wear "delegate" badges, expect to see the sights, will attend a banquet and hope to hear from a member of Congress or two, but they'll also put in work of importance to every Ukrainian-American above the Rio Grande.

Founded in Shamokin, Pa., February 22, 1894, the organization now has 32,000 members affiliated with 400 branches on the North American continent. It is incorporated in New Jersey and strongest in Pennsylvania (coal miners make up a large percentage of the membership).

And how did the association, after all these years, happen to pick Washington for its nineteenth meeting? Dr. Simon Demydchuk, of Brooklyn, supplied the answer.

"You know, George Washington's birthday was purposely chosen as the founding day because of the admiration which Ukrainians bear for your great hero," said Dr. Demydchuk.

Incident in Capitol.

"Well, a short time after the association was created, the Ukrainian priest who was one of the founders and who started up our newspaper, the Svoboda Ukraine Daily, was going through the Capitol. He encountered a very old Negro sweeping the floor.

"'Are you satisfied to do that?' the priest said. 'Yes,' was the reply, 'I am now a free man and I am proud to do this to show my appreciation.'

"The incident was forgotten," the Brooklyn delegate continued, "until a short time ago when the 1937 convention city was being considered. Then one day the anecdote was printed in the Svoboda, launching a movement to hold the meeting in the Capital of our new country. Maybe it's sentimental, but here we are."

Many Women Delegates.

About 25 per cent of the Ukrainian guests are women. In fact, Miss Mary Kiceniuk was elected co-secretary of the convention yesterday. The press committee, of which Emil Revuk is chairman, also has a young woman for a member, Miss Mary Stadner.

Scheduled to last through Saturday, the convention busied itself chiefly with electing officers yesterday. Gregory Herman, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is chairman and Stephen Kuropass secretary. Dr. Ambrose Kibzey, Detroit physician, and D. Brotus, of Rochester, N. Y., are vice chairmen.

National officers of the association are N. Muraszko, Jersey City, supreme president; V. Malevich, Pittsburgh, supreme vice president; D. Halyczyn, Jersey City, supreme recording secretary, and R. Slobodian, Jersey City, supreme financial secretary.

U. S. Official to Speak.

Lieut. Kreml May Inspect D. C. Traffic

Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, Evanston, Ill., traffic expert, who will be honored Thursday night at a dinner sponsored by The Post, was invited yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to inspect Washington's equipment for traffic enforcement and accident prevention.

The police chief suggested that Lieut. Kreml tour the city in a traffic patrol car for first hand information on local conditions.

"Lieut. Kreml is a recognized traffic authority," said Maj. Brown. "We want to show him just what is being done in Washington—with limited facilities—to correct traffic evils. We would consider it an honor if he would accept our invitation to tour the highway and look over our system."

To Get New Equipment.

And at the same time yesterday, Maj. Brown said the police traffic division would receive new accident investigation equipment on July 1. Two new cameras for photographing serious automobile crashes, he said, would replace the present antiquated equipment.

Lieut. Kreml will arrive in Washington tonight. The dinner will be attended by prominent city and Government officials who are interested in current traffic conditions.

Over the National Broadcasting Co. Lieut. Kreml will explain his accident prevention methods which brought a marked reduction in the fatality rate of Evanston and has been applied in numerous other cities throughout the country.

Treated at Hospital.

Taken to Emergency Hospital he was treated for abrasions to his face and hands and possibly a concussion of the brain. He returned home for further treatment from his family physician.

Revocations and Suspensions.

Nine persons lost their driving permits by revocation yesterday: Morris Schwartz, 473 P street northwest; Raymond E. Zeh, 116 Sixth street southeast; James G. Marks, 204 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Charles Grantham, 3232 D street southeast; Andrew S. Boarman, 3670 O street southwest; George M. McClue, 4705 Cooper lane, Brookdale, Md.; John N. Marlow, 1305 N. Veitch street, Clarendon, Va.; John M. Stillwell, 126 Lee avenue, Maryland Park, Md., and Lee F. Clazell, Arlington, Va. All suspensions were effective as of May 7.

Three 45-day suspensions were announced. They included licenses of Oscar G. Edwards, 110 Fifty-third street northeast; Charles P. Perry, 928 M street northwest, and Andrew H. Czarnecki, 217 P street northwest. All were second speeding offenses.

Thirty-day suspensions were made in seven cases. Henry P. Carroll, 1442 Thirty-sixth street northwest; Harrison E. Gordon, 1316 Marion street northwest; Edward B. Davis, 461 E street southwest, second offense; Frank R. Rullen, 4125 Fourth street northwest, second offense; Richard T. Lamb, 1864 Columbia road northwest; Lyman R. McAboy, 1700 B street southeast, second offense, and Cecil B. Green, Alta Vista, Md.

Four nearby residents drew license suspensions: Warren S. Graves, McLean, Va., was suspended from driving for 30 days, as were Tyler P. Maffett, West Falls Church, Va., and Robert P. Black, Districts Heights, Md. Lloyd P. Pratt, Takoma Park, Md., was given a 45-day suspension.

National's Star - Studded Revue Is High-Speed Musical Fun.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE ZIEGFELD FOLLIES." Billie Burke Ziegfeld and the Shuberts present the new revue of 1937, in 2 acts and 24 scenes, "glorifying the American girl," with Fannie Brice, Bobby Clark, Leota Lane, Marcelle Swanson, Cess Daley, Hugh Cameron, Marvin Lawlor, James Farrell, Marian Martin, Cherry and June Preisser, Harrison and Fisher and Stan Kenenagh. Production staged by John Murray Anderson, with music by Vernon Duke and lyrics by Ira Gershwin. Sketches by David Freedman; scenery and costumes designed by Vicente Minnelli and dances directed by Robert Alton. Orchestra under the conductorship of Charles Drury; sketches directed by Edward Clarke Lilleya and Edward D. Dowling. Reviewed Monday night at the National Theater.

Fast-moving, colorful and diversified, with catchy songs, clever dances and novel specialties thickly strewn along its length, the Shuberts' production of the "Ziegfeld Follies" opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night before an audience that atoned for lack of number by the volume of its enthusiasm.

In a revue of this character, there is, of course, no semblance of plot. The skits are unrelated, the musical numbers fall where they may and the individual specialties are "spotted" where it is thought they will do the most good—most of them judiciously.

It is a hilarious and, at times, slightly ribald, entertainment that is unfolded during the two acts and multifarious scenes of the "Follies." Perhaps because musical revues have been so few and far between this season, it seemed to this fourth-row observer that there was not a dull moment during an evening that lasted from 8:30 to 11:15, with one brief intermission—about half a cigaret long. This does not mean that some of the intervals were not more engaging than some of the others, but merely that the whole thing added up to a spontaneous, swift and frivolous evening in the theater. We have not had many of that kind this year.

Some Clever Sketches.

By far the cleverest and most pungently satirical sketches were those dedicated to the "F. S. A.," a mythical governmental spending bureau, "Of Thee I Spend," and "Amateur Night," in which the activities of "Major Bones" were incisively caricatured. There are penetrating humor and keen travesty in both. Some of the others receded a bit from high level of these two.

The score of the piece is not riddled with song hits, but it has its musical moments, even so. I should pick as the melodious hits of the evening the first act's "You Don't Love Me Right," sung by Cass Daley, with Ben Yost's Varsity Eight—which last night was reduced throughout the evening to seven—"Isle in the West Indies," "Midnight Blue" and "Harlem Waltz," and the second act's "Moment of Moments," and "Ridin' the Rails," the best sung number in the production, led by an unnamed basso and the varsity eight with an effect that elicited the greatest applause of the evening, but no encore.

Of the principals there is little that need be said. Fannie Brice and Bobby Clark were greeted by salvos of applause on their first entrances and continued to pile up a high average in every "bit" in which they appeared. Miss Brice's first song is "He Hasn't a Thing Except Me" and from then on she rolls up a fine score with her inimitable dialect, crazy posturing and innate sense of what is funny across the footlights.

Bobby Clark doesn't pose as a singer, but he still lets go with a few loud vocal blasts that will knock any unwary customer right out of his pew. His best sketch, it seems to me, was "Dr. Fradler's Dilemma," in which he plays the part of a noted psychiatrist. He pranced about unctuously in this one, with that sputtering cigar going at top blast.

Many Specialists Score.

It is, needless to say, impossible to chronicle all that goes on in the many scenes of a heterogeneous revue of this sort. Miss Brice and Bobby Clark are "tops" in any man's theater. Then, too, in the cast are such experts in their lines as the Preisser Sisters, June and Cherry, with their exceptional tap and acrobatic dancing, seen on numerous Washington stages many times before; Stan Kavanagh, that amazing juggler from "down under," who does astonishing things with bouncing balls and Indian clubs; Marian Martin, a platinum blonde, more platinum than Jean Harlow ever thought of being, who takes the place of Gypsy Rose Lee in the "strip-tease" number, in which she reveals a gorgeous figure—which was the main idea in the first place—Ruth Harrison and Alex Fisher, who interpolate dances of various sorts, all intricate, during the goings-on; Marvin Lawler, a dancer of the first rank, who works with the Preisser kids; Leota Lane and James Farrell, who do most of the singing, and so on down the line.

The costuming and lighting of all this is in the approved—or sometimes disapproved—manner and occasionally there is revealed a scene of genuine loveliness such as Ziegfeld always made an integral part of his productions.

In the large view, however, the "Ziegfeld Follies" strikes these eyes and ears as being just another Shubert revue. It is, nevertheless, a good show and a full evening's entertainment.

Several prominent Washingtonians will be guests of four members of the board of trustees of American University at a luncheon today at the Willard Hotel. The hosts are Dr. A. C. Christie, Edward F. Colladay, Lanier P. McLachlen and Edgar Morris.

The present and future status of the university will be discussed. Speakers will be Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray and David Lawrence, a trustee.

BELL.

WHILE official duties prevented this column from attempting the Friday night preview of "Lost Horizon," Frank Capra's latest screen production for Columbia Pictures, in the auditorium of the National Press Club, there has reposed on my desk for several weeks the handsomest book I ever have seen devoted to the exploitation of a motion picture. It is, of course, dedicated to "Lost Horizon."

One can form no definite impression of the quality of the dialogue or the dramatic continuity of a film play from a set of "still" pictures reproduced on plate paper in a costly brochure. One can, however, form some conception of the visual beauty of a picture that seems to abound in spectacular flashes that are sumptuously spectacular.

There is, naturally, much to be said on the side of the cast of this picture. Ronald Colman and Jane Wyatt play the leads and Sam Jaffe, the original Kringelein of the stage production of "Grand Hotel," appears as the High Lama in the Tibetan country where much of the action of the drama takes place. Then there are Edward Everett Horton, Margo, noted for her stage and screen impersonations of the leading character in Maxwell Anderson's prize-winning play of "Winterset"—reduced to its lowest terms in the film version, but still a play to be conjured with.

Capra, the director, has made very few mistakes on the Columbia lot. Some of the greatest box-office pictures that company ever has released must be credited to him—"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Broadway Bill," "Lady for a Day," "It Happened One Night" and others of the first rank.

There is manifest in the preliminary releases pertaining to "Lost Horizon" every evidence that in this subject Capra has captured a degree of artistry that the cameras seldom encompass. There are a sweep and depth to many of the scenes that seem to stamp them as masterpieces of photographic skill.

As I say, halftone cuts cannot tell the story, but they at least can indicate in what direction the intention of the producers ran. In this case it seems to have been toward one of the most opulent productions brought to the screen in many months.

"Lost Horizon" will be shown as a "road-show" attraction at the National much in the manner, and for about the same length of time, as "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Good Earth."

I suggest that it will be worth seeing.

Hugh Herbert, that quaint and flittery zany of the celluloids, is doing one of his better jobs on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater this week in a minor item, known by the name of "That Man's Here Again." The imposts set against any newspaper by such a catastrophe as the collapse and incineration of the air queen Hindenburg necessarily imposed space restrictions that could not be overcome at the moment. It should be recorded, in spite of this fact, that "That Man's Here Again" is a better picture than the abbreviated review of it which appeared on these pages Saturday would indicate. There is a juvenile love interest in the thing that seems to ring true and Mr. Herbert is at the top of his form. This Herbert person is one to be considered not too lightly. He is a comedian of the first rank, whose antics are original and intensely amusing. You will like him. You probably do, already.

This young man-about-town, business tycoon and best-dresser, George Marshall, who has been made impresario of the entertainment to be provided at the Dallas Exposition this year, is going places with his show.

From Jack Espey, his "public relations counsel," I learn that in place of the defaulting Hassard Short, who was to have staged the major show at the exposition, Chester Hale will be in charge. Chester Hale is well known to Washington theatergoers as a former producer whose creations once graced the stage of the Palace Theater. Mr. Hale will feature a chorus of 32 beauties and Lynn Murray's male ensemble of singers in the Pan-American Casino. Ray Kavanaugh, the first conductor ever to direct Ravel's "Bolero" in this country, will lead the orchestra, and Georges and Jalna, those incomparable dancers, will be a feature of the entertainment. All this business will have its formal inauguration on June 12.

It is interesting, in this connection, that Stan Kavanagh, featured juggler in the "Follies," opening in the National Theater last night, will be another star member of the troupe.

An extra added attraction in the Cotton Bowl, seating 47,000 people, will be Jack Benny and Mary Livingston, who will broadcast from a glass-inclosed booth to all of that crowd, as well as the outside world, sitting in at their loudspeakers.

As for dance bands, Master Marshall has lined up only such "names" as Ted Fio Rito, Rudy Vallee, Phil Harris, Lanny Ross and Benny Goodman. The dance orchestras will be distinctive units, playing for dancing apart from any organization appearing in the stage show.

Let's all go to Dallas. There is only one small consideration that enters into this expansive project—what do we use for money?

Well, sir, here comes another message from Jack Powell, "the drummer boy," now appearing in London. This one takes the form of the dial of a clock, with drumsticks for hands, and Jack's burnt-cork face providing the hours. The legend under the whole thing is "Time, With Jack Powell, Marches On." That seems to be about it.

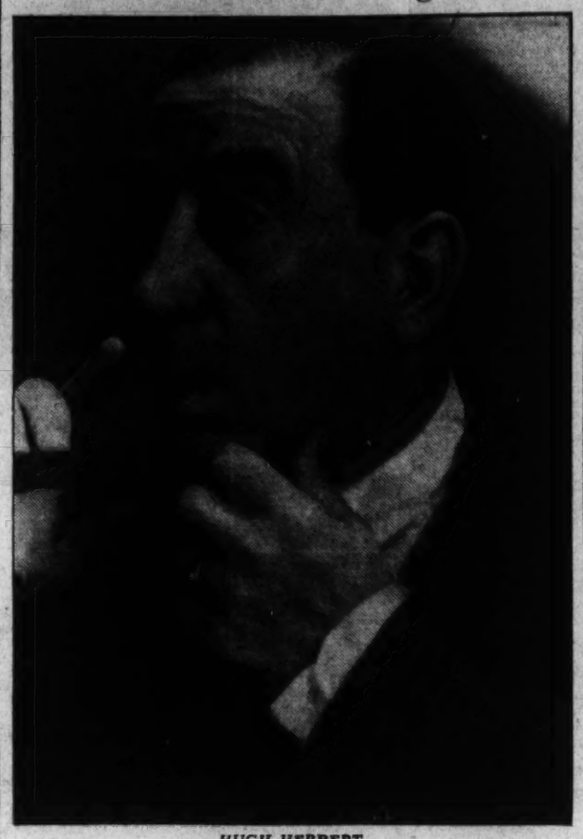
Yes, Sir, Here He Is Again!



HUGH HERBERT,

that gay wag of the motion pictures, who is the star of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater this week in "That Man's Here Again." It would be nice if he were here again actually in person, because this Herbert fellow is one of the most genial stars the cinema can boast and Washington knows from his visit here a year or so ago.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 10.—Idol chatter: Bing Crosby generally addresses acquaintances as Miss or Mister (most Hollywood people call everybody by first names). Shame the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will never live down: Failure to include Ruth Chatterton as a 1936 best performance nominee (for "Dodsworth"). Even her dread of crowds is secondary to Joan Crawford's fear of overweight. Frank Morgan looks more at home in lace-trimmed costumes.

RUTH CHATTERTON.

Tip for males who need prodding to see pictures: Jean Harlow's gowns for "Personal Property" out-dare her "Hell's Angels" show-alls. Movie names are nixed on the China Clipper's passenger list because fame and disaster do not mix. Carole Lombard is a ten-hours-at-a-stretch sleeper (and don't let me hear anybody ask do I mean while she is working). How John Boles blushed when his tall daughter was mistaken for Mrs. Boles.

* * * *

Do Greta Garbo and Katharine Hepburn think they attain more emotion acting in stocking feet, or is it for tootsie comfort? Leslie Howard off-screen reminds me of a bank clerk. When working Bette Davis has a standing lunch-date with her hair-dresser. Was there prediction of Shirley Temple's No. 1 boxoffice rating in the writing: "A little child shall lead them?" You can stop any actor cold by reminding him that Magna Carta defines all actors as "rogues and vagabonds." The "Joneses" have only two representatives on the screen, Buck and Allan.

* * * *

I have long been hearing stories about Mae West's "honorary membership" in various organizations. She belongs to dozens of civic clubs and social unions. I saw the list the other day, and it's as long as a traffic cop's arm. The one that tickled my ribs was her membership in the Brooklyn Eagles, a kids' baseball team. I asked about it.

"Sure I belong," Mae said. "I'm an honorary pitcher." You mean mascot?" I corrected. "I mean pitcher," giggled Miss West. "Those kids know a mean curve when they see one."

Few actors can get off a rib more effectively than Jimmy Steward. His long face and poker expression lend themselves perfectly to the occasion. So I had no idea what was coming when, right in the middle of a meandering wrangle, he exclaimed, "Had you heard that the Trocadero is planning a Midget Revue?" I had not heard, and I asked why the management should do such a thing. "For the benefit of customers," Steward cracked, "who are under the tables."

Speaking of the Troc, I sat at a table adjoining that of my old friend (I still miss her from the screen) Clara Bow. It was star-introducing night, and the lights were dimmed as the master of ceremonies called on notables to take bows. Presently he announced: "Ladies and gentlemen: I want to introduce an actress whose name will always be remembered among theatergoers—Miss Clara Bow." The spotlight splashed in glistening streaks from Clara's red hair as she stood and a din of applause greeted her. She had tears in her eyes when she sat down, and I felt like hugging her when she leaned near to whisper, "Gee, I guess they haven't forgotten me."

Contract Bridge

As a general rule, declarer should not finesse for a card which will drop if the suit breaks evenly. Thus, with 11 trumps, missing only King-small, a player should lay down the Ace instead of finessing for the King; and with nine trumps he should lay down the Ace and King instead of finessing for the Queen.

In today's hand, however, South saw that in spite of his 11 trumps he should finesse for the King.

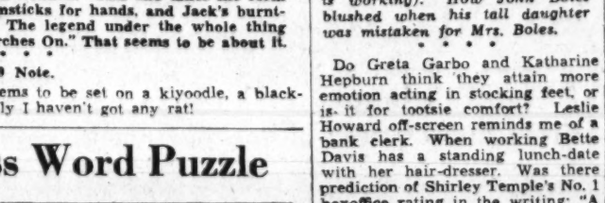
East-West vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	2◇	2♡	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened a spade, dummy's Jack holding the trick. South counted his losers and saw that since a diamond had to be lost in any event, he could afford to lose two club tricks only if there were no trump losers. Conversely, he could afford to lose a trump trick if the club loss could be restricted to one trick. Declarer then formulated a plan which would insure his contract in one of the two ways mentioned.

At the second trick he led a low diamond to the Queen, West winning with the ace. West returned the Jack of diamonds and declarer won with dummy's King and ruffed a third round. The Ace of spades was next laid down, and a small spade ruffed in dummy.

With spades and diamonds stripped from the North-South hands, the stage was all set for declarer's trump play. On a low trump from dummy East played low, and South finessed the Queen. When West showed out, South picked up the King of trumps anad scored his game.

When South took the trump finesse, he was not sure it would be successful, but he did not mind losing to the King of hearts; for then West would have to lead a club up to his King, or lead another suit, which would permit South to trump in dummy and discard a losing club from his own hand.

A. F. L. Seeks Way To Control Prices

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor proposed yesterday that President Roosevelt appoint a commission to devise methods for controlling prices.

Rapidly increasing prices, the federation said in its monthly business survey, are retarding recovery by holding down production. Until production is increased, the labor organization contended, there is little hope of getting all of 9,000,000 unemployed persons back to work.

"There is ample evidence today that many industries are raising prices far more than is necessary to cover production costs and give investors a fair return on their payment," the survey said.

"Such price profiteering prevents the steady increase in workers' ability to buy goods and services which alone can bring healthy growth in industry."

New York, May 10.

WHEN MRS. GEORGE S. KAUFMAN was in England last, she received a phone call from Mrs. Gilbert Miller, inviting her to a dinner party . . . Mrs. Miller, whose attitude toward royalty wouldn't exactly constitute a chapter in the handbook of communism, told Mrs. Kaufman: "Please be sure and come. P. G. will be there" . . . The inclusion of "P. G." didn't excite Mrs. Kaufman at all—and so she didn't attend . . . Not for months did she learn that by "P. G." Mrs. Miller meant Prince George. Mrs. Kaufman thought she had referred to P. G.—Wodehouse!

He'll appear in the "Big Broadcast of 1938" . . . Gene Tunney, the Shakespeare scholar, was asked what he thought of John Gielgud as Hamlet. In all seriousness, Tunney replied: "Y'know, that was a very fine play!" . . . Charles Martin, who dramatizes cases of circumstantial-evidence victims for the radio, presented Charles Perovic on Saturday's broadcast. Perovic spent 20 years in jail for a murder he didn't commit. Martin found him, after a long search, in Rochester, N. Y.—operating the Golden Rule Barber Shop.

The role she's seeking is that of the sad-faced, semi-tragic Russian duchess. The casting agent still is doubtful of hiring her, because she can't give the role the required touch of the tragic . . . Julie Eckert was the fiancee of Count Attilina Camisa—who died a horrible death in the Italo-Ethiopian war.

NOEL COWARD visited George S. Kaufman a few weeks ago and lectured him upon the benefits to be derived from traveling . . . "That's what's wrong with you," Coward chided. "You're afraid to get on a plane, you refuse to travel, and it would do wonders for you. Look at me—I'm at home in Singapore, India . . . all over the world. Travel has made me what I am—but you. Well, look at you" . . . The next day Coward had a nervous breakdown—and had to close his show!

AND WHEN COWARD was appearing in "Design for Living," grossing almost $25,000 a week, he asked the Shuberts to put up curtains in his dressing room. The producers obliged, but at the end of the week Coward received a bill for $7 . . . The playwright set out for his bank, drew $7—in pennies—and sent it to the producers. The following day he received the bill—duly receipted!

'Colonel' Lake To Close Doors A Month Early

"Colonel" Jimmy Lake, local burlesque impresario, yesterday said the agitation against burlesque throughout the land is forcing him to close his doors after one more week.

"I usually run a month longer," he stated, "but shucks, the attitude of the people has changed. Now they giggle and laugh at the strip-tease girls. It all happened overnight. In fact, I'm taking the word 'burlesque' off my marquee, and will never use it again."

Ann Corio, a leading strip-tease artist, fears she may have to insert an ad asking for work as a cook.

"I can also cook," she said backstage, looking up from her crocheting. "If I put the ad in, I won't have any trouble getting references from the Gayety's first-row customers."

Miss Corio thinks the outlook for her art is pretty grim, but if she doesn't get that job as a cook in Washington, she'll enter barnyard stock at a summer theater in New England, breaking a lifelong rule never to desert burlesque.

About strip-teasing, on which she is an authority, having invented it in its more modest forms, Miss Corio had plenty to say:

"In the last few years a very cheap type of producer has come into burlesque. There was lots of money to be made and shoemakers and tailors closed their shops and went into strip-tease.

"Now there are two types of strip-tease, the nice strip-tease and the vulgar strip-tease. The result was there were four or five strip-teasers in every show, and most of them were vulgar, because that was what the cheap managers ordered."

Ring Commission Refuses Sanction for Gevinson-Ingram Bout on Police Card

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

Lou Termed Too Green For Match

By Bill McCormick.

The Boxing Commission last night definitely turned thumbs down on a bout between Southpaw Lou Gevinson, who only recently deserted the amateur ranks, and Ray Ingram, eighth ranking featherweight contender. The bout had been announced earlier in the day as one of the features of the police benefit card, to be held at Griffith Stadium, June 2.

"Gevinson is not yet experienced enough to fight Ingram in a main bout for a card such as a police show," announced Commissioner Kenneth Parkinson, after a conference with Maj. Ernest Brown, chairman of the commission. "I for one will not sanction the bout, and Maj. Brown feels the same way."

The commission received contracts for the bout a few days ago, but the contest had not been sanctioned. Under the rules and regulations of the commission, no bout may be announced until it has ben sanctioned by the governing board of local boxing. Announcements of the Ingram-Gevinson bout were made in the editions of papers which were sold at Turner's Arena, the scene of a bout between Jorge Brescia and Marty Gallagher last night.

Three Pro Fights.

The Commissioners learned of the announcement and immediately Maj. Brown and Parkinson conferred on the matter and announced their decision.

Gevinson, a local boy who fought for many years in the amateurs before entering the professional ring, has had three pro fights, and lost one. His first two bouts were against pitifully inadequate opponents, but in his third start as a professional he defeated Joe Temes, a fair featherweight.

In his fourth bout, Gevinson was matched with Johnny Pena, a venerable featherweight with a good record. Pena, a decided underdog in the wagering, gave Lou a sound trouncing, winning the fight largely because of superior body punching and ringmanship.

Ingram, a native of Florida who now makes his headquarters here, fought for many months in the preliminary ranks here as a lightweight. Deciding he would have no trouble making the featherweight limit, Ray started campaigning in that division and his efforts have been so successful he was recently ranked No. 8 contender by the National Boxing Association.

Ahearn Nonplussed.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who is in charge of the police benefit card this year and who was attempting to make the Ingram-Gevinson contest, said after hearing of the decision that he would arrange a satisfactory substitute, but insisted he could not see why sanction for the bout was not forthcoming.

"Ingram and Gevinson is a natural," he insisted. "I cannot understand what is going on. First an investigatoin is directed against me on statements made by irresponsible people, and now the commission ruins this natural bout. I cannot understand it."

W. & L. Drubs Tech; Wilson Routs Landon

Little Generals Win, 13 to 9; Woodward Tops St. Alban's.

Washington-Lee won its twelfth victory in 15 starts yesterday when it outslugged Tech High to take a 13-9 decision at Ballston, Va. The Little Generals knocked Tommy Doonis out of the box and continued their attack on "Abe" Lincoln.

Tech outhit the home team, 16 to 11, but failed to bunch them as effectively. None of the 16 were extra-base bingles.

In another schoolboy fray Wilson High trounced Landon Prep, 15 to 9, despite a rousing finish on the part of the prepsters. Landon scored six runs in the ninth, including a home run by Randall, who was the last man to cross the plate. Eaton's relief pitching tamed Wilson in the late innings.

On the North Ellipse Woodward Prep won its fourth victory in six starts, nosing out St. Alban's School, 4 to 3. Saunders held St. Alban's to five hits while Woodward was garnering seven off Brown and Wideman.

Gallagher Decisioned By Brescia

Argentine Fighter Pummels Marty Into Submission.

A record crowd of 1,822 paid a near record sum of $2,192 for the purpose of Watching Gallagher go down to glorious defeat at the hands of the 8-to-5 favorite.

Despite the unanimous decision, the fight was closer than X and Y. The Post score sheet gave Brescia only a two-point lead at the finish and the writer thought a draw decision would not have been out of place.

As are most heavyweight bouts, the contest was marked by dull periods, but boasted periods of toe-to-toe slugging that equaled anything ever seen in local rings for sheer ferocity.

In two rounds, the eighth and the ninth, the boys were so hard at their stints that they failed to hear the bell and had to be pried apart seconds after the official period of fighting had ended.

Marty bled from a cut over his right eye as early as the first round. Brescia received a deep gash over his left optic in the second round. Before the finish of each succeeding round the fighters were drenched from the claret that continued to spurt despite the ministrations of their handlers.

Marty boasted clear superiority at close quarters, as he mauled and smacked poor Jorge's ribs unmercifully almost every time they came close together. Brescia, however, landed numerous sizzling right uppercuts and on occasion tied up Marty's two big paws when they came together. These tactics gave him the edge that earned the decision, in the opinion of the official deciders.

Joe Lipps, of Ty Ty, Ga., and Murray, Kanner, former District amateur champion, went through six rounds of semifinal mauling as dismal as the woebegone expression on Murray's pan. Lipps tried hard enough, but he couldn't reach high enough to tag Kanner on his lofty chin and Murray wouldn't let him get home any wallops in the brisket. Ther you have it. Oh, yes, Kanner won the decision, if that makes any difference.

Mario Caroselli, of Italy, won a unanimous decision from Hunter Crostic in a rousing six-round preliminary. The inexperienced Richmond middleweight gave a good account of himself in every round, but he lacked the polish to take Caroselli into camp.

Dickey Out 2 Weeks After Arm Injury

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10.—Monte Pearson, the Yankees' big right-hander, held the White Sox to one hit today and shut them out, 7-0.

Joe DiMaggio belted out his first two home runs of the season and George Selkirk his fifth. It was Pearson's third victory and snapped a four-game losing streak for the world champions.

Catcher Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, had to leave the game with an injured arm in the sixth inning. Dickey was hit near the elbow by a ball pitched by veteran Ted Lyons.

Preakness Entry, 16 Other Horses Killed in Blaze

Baltimore, May 10.—A final checkup today by officials of the Maryland Jockey Club revealed 17 horses, including one entered in the Preakness, died in the fire which destroyed one of the large barns at Pimlico race track Saturday night.

J. W. H. (Bill) Martin, Worthington Valley sportsman, lost eight horses, one of which was Triple Action, entered in the Preakness. Triple Action, although rescued, was so badly burned it had to be destroyed.

His brother, W. E. Johnson, lost Swift Flash, a horse that has been running in $3,000 races. The other horse destroyed was Impudent, owned by Maj. L. H. Drennan, of Monkton.

Louis Opens Camp.

Hoyas Down Temple, 9-7, for Ninth in Row

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Scoring runs in clusters of threes, a crowd of Georgetown boys who powdered the old pill like a group of Class A ping-pong players in practice, piled up nine runs yesterday at the Hilltop to win their ninth consecutive victory, a 9-to-7 decision over Temple.

Temple added five runs to its total in the last three innings—just two short of a tie.

But Mike had a little in reserve for trying situations, and used it to best advantage, especially in the last inning, when the Philadelphians threatened to become boisterous. Temple patted his pitching for 11 hits, but failed to get them at the right time.

Harry Bassin, the Hoyas' slugging first baseman, stole the day's batting honors, whacking out four hits in five trips to the plate, including a home run and double. Kovacevich and Black, of Temple, also hit round-trippers.

Bassin's home run, a lengthy drive to rightfield, came with none on in the third inning, scoring his team's fourth run. Black's circuit clout occurred in the next frame with Bekampis reposing on second. Kovacevich connected with the bases clear in the seventh.

Georgettown's three runs in the first were the result of a pass to Nolan, Bassin's double, and singles by Barabas and Keegin. A couple of Temple miscues, a pass to Keating, and singles by Bodine and Cavadine, accounted for the third inning scores, other than Bassin's drive.

The Owl's famed Jack Williams, distinguished by the successful use of the old hidden-ball play, by which Johnny Cavadine was trapped off third.

The Hoyas got in their batting practice in the first six minnins, going into the seventh with a 9-to-2 advantage, and it was just as well, for the Owls suddenly realized the deplorable state of their affairs at this juncture and made a furious but futile effort to right matters. a strike-out king, was held in reserve, and probably will pitch against Maryland this afternoon at College Park. Washington Rallies To Avoid a Shutout

Bonetti Hurls No-Hit Ball Until Sixth; Linke Stars in Relief Role as Browns Gain 5-0 Lead in First Two Innnings.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Mo., May 10.—A skinny, peak-faced Italian youth, Julio Bonetti, who went South with the Browns this spring as a batting practice stooge was pitching for keeps today in his first big league start and hung a 6-to-3 beating on the Washington athletes.

Manager Rogers Hornsby unveiled Julio in a starting role in pursuance of a well-defined suspicion that the fellow was wasting his talents in batting practice, and Julio proved him eminently correct.

In fact, the slight right-hander and the sparse gathering of fans in the park, were entertaining visions of a no-hit performance until the sixth inning, when Ed Linke whistled a hit through shortstop.

In fact, young Julio was on the threshold of a shutout victory in his major league debut—a two-hit shutout—because during those first eight innings Linke's blow and Joe Kuhel's single into rightfield in the seventh were the only two hits made by the Washingtonians who had scored no runs.

He ended up with a five-hit game against the Nats, this 23-year-older from the sandlots of San Francisco, which have also given those other Italian stars—Tony Lazzeri, the DiMaggios and Frankie Crosetti—to the big leagues.

Julio threw a nice fast ball at the Nats with a half overhand motion, and when they laid back for it, he chucked a baffling change of pace that had 'em swinging even more futilely. Until the ninth inning, the Nats were able to get only three balls out of the infield.

They did come up with three runs in the ninth, when Julio, a tired young man by that time, yielded three of the five hits he permitted, but he had a six-run lead at the time and there was no alarm on the Browns' bench.

They had three on base when Cascarella walked Allen, at which point Joe Vosmik inserted a two-bagger against the right-field wall to score a pair of his colleagues. Eventually Vosmik also scored—on an infield out by Bell.

With that 5-0 start, it was a breeze for Bonetti and the Browns. They upped their lead to 6-0 in the seventh, when Bell doubled and Clift singled through the box and those were the figures when the Nats came up with three runs in the ninth.

Bonetti had it.

Italy's sons, once removed, got a draw for the day. Julio's compatriot, Joe Cascarella, a veteran of the big leagues, flopped in the same degree that Julio starred. The Browns chased him off the mound with a five-run assault in the first two innings.

Ed Linke took up the Washington pitching from there and he did a better than tolerable job of it, holding the Browns to five hits and one run over the remainder of the distance, but with Julio out there turning back the Nats the way he was, Linke's pitching might better have been saved for another day.

But Linke was something of a valiant figure himself. It was he who first disturbed Bonetti's idea of a no-hit game with his single in the sixth and the Washington pitcher accounted for another of the Nats' five hits when he singled in the ninth to touch off their futile three-run rally.

It was a lot of shoddy baseball that Washington played in those first two innings when the Browns got away winging to a 5-0 lead. Three damaging errors by the Nats were no drawback to the Browns in those two innings.

Cascarella, Kuhel and Myer were caught flatfooted at the start, when Harry Davis beat out a drag bunt down the first base line and to aggravate matters Myer threw the ball past Kuhel when he finally picked it up, Davis racing to second. A bit later, with two out, Bell scored Davis with the first of his three hits of the afternoon — a double against the rightfield screen. And then to make matters worse, Al Simmons muffed Clift's wind-blown pop in shor center and Bell scored from second.

They bounced right back at Cascarella in the second inning when Carey got a single on a ball that took a freak hop over Buddy Lewis' shoulder. Then things got downright bad. Ben Chapman, who has been a superheterodyne hero in the ontfield all through the West, made a miserable muff of Davis' line drive and the Browns had two on base.

One Rookie's Happy.

TAKES CARE OF THE HIGHBALLS

THIS kind of weather makes you want to linger over your highballs. You can do that when you make them with Canada Dry's Sparkling Water, because the sparkle lasts. You can prove this by leaving an opened bottle of Canada Dry's extra-lively Water in a refrigerator. Twenty-four hours later it will still sparkle with zest. Or pour Canada Dry's Water into a champagne glass and note its brilliant "Champagne" Sparkle. This is what PIN-POINT CARBONATION does. It's a special Canada Dry process.

Sweet Desire Overtakes Field to Triumph in $3,500 Pimlico Oaks Event

Rough Race In Feature; Morning 3d

$7.50 Paid by Much-Beaten Horse for 'Oaks' Victory.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, May 10.—The Bomar Stable's Sweet Desire, thoroughly beaten in her two previous starts this year, came from last to first in the thirteenth running of the Pimlico Oaks, $3,500 added feature of today's Maryland Jockey Club program.

The daughter of Jean Valjean-Sweet Genevieve, piloted by Willie Saunders, scored over the Belair Stud's Lucky Pledge by a length and a half. Another four lengths away in third place came Morning, the property of Mrs. R. A. Van Clief.

The mile and a furlong contest, fashioned for fillies, was worth $2,325 to the Detroit-owned stable and Sweet Desire was clocked in the worst time in the history of the event—1:54 4-5. She paid a $7.40 mutuel.

Short Scuffle at Start.

Morning and Lucky Pledge had a short scuffle for the doubtful honor of setting the pace which was won by the former. In the meanwhile, Sweet Desire was trailing and jogging along. Approaching the far turn, Sweet Desire was shaken up by Saunders and she responded by beginning the drive that was to bring victory.

Morning stopped badly and Lucky Hour could not cope with Sweet Desire when the real issue came.

Doris Rene, a daughter of Philippi, defeated a field that included six other Maryland foaled juveniles in the first race that opened the final week's program here. Ridden by Joe Wagner, Doris Rene developed momentum in the stretch and took the verdict by a length from La Loutre. The latter was awarded the place money in a photo finish with Prince Mowlee, one that set most of the pace.

The favorite, Travelo, was not prominent. Doris Rene, owned by H. H. Neusteter, paid an $8.30 mutuel and was clocked in 0:55 4-5 for the 4½ furlongs.

Kurtsinger Takes Bow.

Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, who won the Derby Saturday with War Admiral, finished fourth with Dark Flyer. Kurtsinger doffed his cap in response to a round of applause as the field marched to the post.

Mrs. H. Good's Balcony made it two victories in a row in the second rcae, taking a photo decision from Vitascope and Dilwin. With Jockey R. Morris aboard the ultimate winner held a slim lead throughout over Dilwin.

Vitascope came with a rush in the final 50 yards to split the pair. Balcony paid a $7 mutuel and registered the mediocre time of 1:14 1-5 for the six furlongs.

Flosilda Pays $32.40.

Longshot players, who played the right horse, had reason to shout at the conclusion of the fourth race, a six furlong sprint.

Mrs. H. Horst's Flosilda, making her first start of the year, came from behind the leaders to win by a length and a half from Stool Pigeon. The latter had a like advantage over Off and On for the place. Flosilda, paying a $32.40 mutuel, was nicely handled by Jockey Joe Wagner, who was riding his second winner of the day. The winner turned in buggy-horse time of 1:14 4-5.

J. P. Jones' Catomar defeated Abaddon by three lengths in the fifth race, a test of a mile and a sixteenth for maidens and winners of one race. The Omar Khayyam filly was bounding out of the gate when the start came and interfered with Abaddon.

Jockey Bobby Merritt steadied Catomar while Sun Scout set the pace and then put her to a drive that easily carried her to victory. Abaddon came willingly at the finish to force Sun Scout into third money. Catomar was third choice in the group of seven and paid $8.40. Time was 1:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORIS RENE, $8.30, $5.20, $4.20; LA LOUTRE, $8.60, $6.00; PRINCE MOWLEE, $11.80.

DORIS RENE, sent to the leaders at once on the outside, rallied when placed to pressure and was drawing clear at the end. LA LOUTRE closed with a rush after going forwardly. PRINCE MOWLEE had high early speed, but tired badly in the final sixteenth. DARK FLYER closed some ground under punishment. TRAVELO showed a dull effort. BROKEN RHYTHM was not a factor. SANDID was pulled sharply when in tight quarters after breaking on top.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Linstead Handicap Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at once. Winner, D. A. Read's br. g. (A) by His Majesty—Caller Herin. Trained by J. T. Skinner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:32 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNDRILLIN, $5.70, $3.40, $3.00; SYRIAC, $4.00, $3.00; GREATOREX, $3.20.

DUNDRILLIN, under restraint for a mile, took command at the final fence and was under pressure at the end. SYRIAC, a distant trailer to the twelfth fence, came with a rush in the closing stages. GREATOREX, closest to the pacemaking of FLYING FEATHERS, was pulled up sharply when BRIAR BLUE ran out at the thirteenth fence, bumped WILFRID G. and closed willingly after regaining stride. WILFRID G. stopped after interference. KENTUCKY GINGER fell at the ninth fence. BRIAR BLUE was in front when he ran out approaching the final fence. FLYING FEATHERS set a good pace, made a bad landing at the eleventh fence and lost his rider when carried out by BRIAR BLUE.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Kilroy. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:19. Winner, Mrs. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALCONY, $7.00, $4.20, $3.20; VITASCOPE, $4.70, $3.40; DILWIN, $4.80.

BALCONY, quick to begin, shook off repeated challenges from DILWIN while saving ground and was under pressure at the finish while tiring. VITASCOPE, forced to the outside for racing room in the stretch, came with a belated rush at the end. DILWIN closed willingly. SMALL CHANCE went evenly, but was held safe. BILL BLEIWEISS showed a good effort. EASTER HERALD was forwardly placed, but tired at the end. LADOGAN raced wide throughout. The others were not prominent.

DAILY DOUBLE—FIRST AND THIRD RACES—PAID $51.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Trojan. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:51½. Winner, Mrs. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOSILDA, $32.40, $10.20, $6.30; STOOL PIGEON, $3.50, $2.80; OFF AND ON, $5.30.

FLOSILDA, rushed into contention at once, gained steadily and drew out on STOOL PIGEON at the end. The latter was rated along while taking command, set a good pace, but could not resist the winner. OFF AND ON found racing room on the inside approaching the stretch and closed willingly. SUN SWEEP, slow to strike his stride, came very wide to improve his position sharply and closed with good courage. WISE MONEY stopped after being in the thick of contention. PROTEUS faltered after pressing the pace of STOOL PIGEON.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Tacumah. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:22½. Off at 4:23½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CATOMAR, $8.40, $4.00, $3.20; ABADDON, $4.00, $3.00; UNHERALDED, $5.00.

CATOMAR, first out of the stall at the break, was steadied along in close pursuit of the pace of SUN SCOUT, took command easily approaching the stretch and drew clear. ABADDON, blocked by the winner at the break, saved ground on the swing to the stretch and closed gamely on the outside. UNHERALDED was a factor throughout. SUN SCOUT was rushed to the front and tired gradually through the final quarter. BOMAR suffered interference at the start. ZINNIA ran out badly at the early turns and stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $3,500 added. The Pimlico Oaks. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:53½. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. f. (3), by Jean Valjean—Sweet Genevieve. Trained by R. E. Potts. Net value to winner, $2,325; second, $750; third, $500; fourth, $250. †R. Farr-Mrs. R. A. Van Clief entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWEET DESIRE, $7.40, $5.90, out. LUCKY PLEDGE, $4.40, out; MORNING (entry), out.

SWEET DESIRE, allowed to race on own courage until midway to the backstretch, came to the outside to improve position steadily when placed to a drive, took command at the eighth pole and was kept to pressure. LUCKY PLEDGE was taken in hand when outrun by MORNING entering the backstretch and came gamely in the final test. MORNING went to the front under hustling tactics and tired. ENAMOR bore out at the turns and could not threaten under a hard ride. GRACEFUL FLIGHT, off slowly, was rushed to contention and stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000, claiming. The Rhoda. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:23. Off at 5:25. Winner, C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARN STORMER, $15.70, $7.40, $3.60; MISS EPE, $8.40, $4.30; CANCEL, $2.40.

BARN STORMER, in the thick of contention from the start while racing on the outside of the leaders, steadied to the stretch and rallied when placed to a stout drive to be up in the final strides. MISS EPE, always formerly placed, took a slight lead over CANCEL inside the sixteenth pole, but tired suddenly nearing the finish and just lasted for the place. CANCEL took command in the opening furlong, but tired gradually through the stretch. HATS OFF saved ground and closed well. TAMBOV could not threaten. RUNNING WATER had a flash of early speed. TOM'S BOY was taken up sharply when in tight quarters at the half-mile pole.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Rock Point. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:52½. Winner, P. M. Ryan's br. m. (4), by Kilkerry—Placerta. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 4, 1:14 1-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:54.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONEY BOY, $8.50, $4.00, $3.30; DEPARTED, $5.40, $3.70; ZEMBLA, $3.40.

TONEY BOY, under improved handling, assumed command going to the first turn, set a swift pace and drew out in the final sixteenth to win easily. DEPARTED gained sharply nearing the final bend, but was no match for the winner. ZEMBLA lacked early speed and came with a belated rush in the final eighth. CHURCH CALL raced wide most of the way. CREDULOUS was held safe after going forwardly. DUTCH UNCLE moved up on the inside at the far turn, but stopped. MADDEST lacked speed throughout.

Post Entries Boost Tourney Field to 85

Eddie Bean, who tied Claude Rippy for the Woodmont medal last week; Martin McCarthy, Beaver Dam star, and Billy Shea, the Georgetown freshman from Congressional, were among the prominent post entries for the Chevy Chase Invitation tournament, starting tomorrow.

The course was open for practice rounds yesterday and several competitors took advantage and tested the layout. Qualifying starts tomorrow after another opportunity for practice rounds today.

Additional entries—3:05, N. E. Perrin (C. C.), J. E. DeSibour (C. C.); 3:10, John Burke (Ken.), Billy Shea (Cong.); 12:34, Maury Fitzgerald (Ken.), E. J. Carver (B. D.); 1:23, Eddie Bean (B. D.), Martin McCarthy (B. D.).

Gordon Hittenmark has received more than 75 entries for the National Capital Radio Open golf tournament, at Kenwood, starting Sunday, when the host club members will qualify. Monday and Tuesday are also preliminary rounds. The finals are slated on Wednesday.

Texas Bars Horse And Dog Wagering

Austin, Tex., May 10 (AP).—The House turned a deaf ear today to protests of authors of a bill prohibiting dog-race betting and rewrote it to make it outlaw both dog and horse-race wagers. Representatives then sent the combined proposal to the Senate.

Sponsors of the bill contended the purpose of the horse race amendment was to kill it. Advocates of repeal of the horse-race betting law have been trying for weeks without avail to get a vote in the Senate on that issue.

Advocates of the amendment asserted they were against all forms of gambling, but did not think it was fair to permit horse-race betting and prohibit wagers on dog races.

Men Past 40—

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W 45th St., N Y. Ask for economy size. Save $1.

Gettysburg Wins, 8-1, Over Johnnies

Annapolis, Md., May 10.—Winning five of the six matches in singles and all three of the doubles, Gettysburg defeated St. Johns on the local courts this afternoon, 8 to 1. Except for the winning game, which Centurani played against Henry, St. Johns did not get a set in the singles.

The best match of the afternoon was in the doubles, in which Hendrickson and Berk, of the visitors, defeated Ennis and Moore in two hard-fought sets, 12—10, 12—10.

Trimmier Boat Wins.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., May 10.—Lloyd Trimmier's blue check cock, Up and Up, won the Allegany Racing Club's 300-mile yearlings event from Cincinnati by averaging 1,112.54 yards per minute. Black Douglas and Dream Boat, both owned by Charles Jewell, copped second and third places, respectively.

This Morning

Well, Well! Fischer Is Back Again!

St. Louis, Mo.—This fellow Carl Fischer who joined up with the Nats today is something of a vagabond pitcher. Ever since he came into the big leagues he has been shedding uniforms like a cocoon. He's been a member of every western club in the American League, and when he bounced back to Washington this morning it was the third time he had been sold to the Nats.

POVICH.

Before and between his big league affiliation there were a couple of stretches in the minors. He came up to the Nats from Newark in '30, a $20,000 purchase, and in '32 they traded him to the St. Louis Browns in the deal for Dick Coffman. Fischer, a big, curly-headed left-hander, will be even for life if he never hops aboard another Pullman.

• • • •

Washington bought him back from St. Louis late in '32 to use him in the deal that sent Fred Marberry to Detroit along with Coffman in exchange for Earl Whitehill, but Fischer didn't stay put in Detroit. They sold him to the White Sox, but by the end of the '35 season he was off on his travels again.

• • • •

He fell right out of the majors this time, joining up with Kansas City. A couple months later found him with St. Paul, and he was with Buffalo when the Indians picked him off the draft list last winter. When he joined up with Cleveland, he completed the cycle of the western division of the American League.

• • • •

By that time it was getting so that Fischer never picked up a morning paper but what he was reading about he was released, sold, traded or shipped down the river.

At that, he must have had something to recommend him despite his failure to stick, for just as surely as the club released him another was eager to take a chance on his pitching. Looking back, he has the record of a confirmed in-and-outer, throwing in a beautiful performance whenever some manager was ready to give up on him.

• • • •

He had a tolerably good season for Washington in '31 when he won 13 and lost 11, but he couldn't win for the Nats in '32, so they traded him to the Browns for Dick Coffman. But he could win against the Nats. Two days after Coffman and Fischer exchanged uniforms, Fischer beat Washington with Coffman pitching, 7 to 1.

• • • •

Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, was ready to give up on him in 1935 when, as a last resort, he threw Fischer again at the Nats in Griffith Stadium one August afternoon. That day Fischer clinched his job on the pay roll for the rest of the season. He shut Washington out, pitching a no-hit game for eight innings.

• • • •

Ossie Bluege spoiled that no-hit performance for Fischer with one out in the ninth inning when he singled into leftfield, but you couldn't blame Bluege. Unlike Dave Harris, who beat Tommy Bridges out of a no-hit game with a single in the ninth when Bridges had a 15-run lead, Bluege didn't get his hit out of pure cussedness. Fischer had only a 1-0 lead at the time and the Nats were very much in the ball game.

• • • •

Canny Clark Griffith paid $7,500 to the Indians for Fischer, but he was taking no long chance when he did. It wasn't $7,500 risked on the possibility that Fischer would make good for the Nats. There was, in fact, no risk at all.

• • • •

Griffith is smart about buying up these pitchers who have been a success in the minor leagues. He knows he can get his money out of them. Belve Bean and Jack Salveson were notable minor league successes who failed with the Nats, but Griffith took no loss on their purchases by the Nats. He sold both of 'em back to minor league clubs for as much as he paid and he can doubtless get close to $7,500 for Fischer from Buffalo, where he won 13 games and lost only 2 last year.

• • • •

Fischer wasn't exactly a flop with the Indians. He didn't get much of a tryout with 'em, in fact. Pitched only six innings for the Cleveland club during the exhibition games and since the season started he has faced only five batters, allowing only one hit.

• • • •

But Manager Steve O'Neill, forced to take some action because Cleveland newspapers were on his neck, worked up a mad against Fischer who took a full windup that permitted the aged Tony Lazzeri to steal third base the other day. The Cleveland papers were crying for some action from O'Neill and it took the form of firing Fischer.

• • • •

Washington has really been wanting Fischer for some time now. Twice before this season the Indians asked waivers on the fellow and twice Washington claimed him. Each time Cleveland withdrew the waiver requests, but the other day when Washington claimed him again, they stuck.

Old Rajah Hornsby (He's 41 Now) Is Still Right Up There Swinging!

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Mo., May 10.—The greatest right-handed hitter who ever lived, they call Rogers Hornsby, and, at 41, he's still in there swinging for his St. Louis Browns.

The Rajah has no illusions about his ground-covering ability; at best, he was no Eddie Collins or Buddy Myer around second base, but the Browns need his hitting, he reckons so that's why he's out there in his team's infield every day at an age when other ball players have long since hung up their spikes.

An interviewer's delight because he leaves nothing unsaid that is on his mind, the Rajah cheerfully admitted that he might handicap his team on the defense, but that doesn't disturb him.

"Sure, I don't get around so well out there, but I can win more ball games with my bat than I could lose in the field," he was saying. "Besides, there isn't anybody around who can give the club a better job of it at second base. We need hitting a heluva sight more than we need fielding and I'll hit as long as I can drag myself up to the plate. I know that."

Not so many minutes later, up there at the plate in his first appearance at bat for the day, the Rajah almost clinched that argument by whaling a steaming two-bagger against the wall in deep centerfield to score the Browns' only run of the day. The old fellow can still hit, all right.

• • • •

"Besides, it's good business to have me in there," he was saying. "I'm interested in making this club a financial success for the new backers. We don't have any big names on the team, not much color, I figure the fans would like to see me in there—it'll help at the gate.

"Anyway, I like to play ball, not every day; perhaps I couldn't make it every day. When the ground is slow and wet, I can't go in there; might pull a charley horse that would put me out of the line-up for a month. Can't afford to take that chance, but I'm gonna be in there as long as I think it'll do the team any good. I ain't bragging, but we need my hitting."

Hornsby said he didn't think the pennant race was a setup for any club this year. He thought most all of 'em were improved except the Yankees, and so it will be tougher on them. The clubs the Yanks used to push over last year are in there battling 'em this season, he pointed out.

• • • •

Eventually he got around to talking about Bob Feller. Hornsby was one of the first to dissent in the opinion that the Cleveland sensation is a great pitcher or will be a winner. There's a dozen pitchers around the league he'd prefer right now, he said, if he was trying to build a winning staff.

"Sure, he's got something, all right," said the Rajah, "but he doesn't know what to do with it. Feller's still an awkward kid on the mound. No poise, no cute tricks no experience. He'll strike out plenty, but he'll walk plenty, too. He'll beat himself in plenty of games because he doesn't know how to pitch yet.

"Don't get me wrong, though. He can heave that ball and he may make it in time, but the best thing I can say about him is that he's a good prospect right now—not a winning pitcher. I wouldn't want to be depending too much on him if I were his manager; how about that, Charley?"

That last question was addressed to Charley O'Leary, the wizened little coach of the Browns who was a shortstop for the Detroit Tigers back in the early days of Ty Cobb.

• • • •

"Well, I dunno much about Feller except that I think they're too quick on the trigger when they go comparing the kid to Walter Johnson," said O'Leary. "Sure, he's fast, but there ain't but one Johnson.

"I was in that Detroit line-up the day that Walter broke in, in August, 1907, and there's no comparison between his speed that day and the speed Feller's breaking in with. Johnson was oodles faster than this boy. And it stands to reason that he was.

"Why, Johnson was bigger to start with, and he used to throw that ball with that side-arm motion that got his body and everything he owned behind it. He had rhythm and timing and everything. No kid who just hauls off and throws, like Feller, can possibly put the same stuff on a ball that Walter had.

"Maybe sometime, if Feller learns how to pitch, he'll be another Johnson. But Johnson knew how to pitch from the moment he came into the big leagues."

Homers Give Cubs 4-3 Win Over Giants

Galan, Collins Each Clout for Circuit in 5th Frame.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Home runs by Augie Galan and Ripper Collins in the fifth inning were the principal blows in a Chicago attack that gave the Cubs a 4-3 triumph over the Giants today. The four-baggers were hit off Hal Schumacher, who lost his fourth game of the season.

Derby Victor Walks To Pimlico 'Home'

Baltimore, May 10.—War Admiral, winner of the Kentucky Derby, walked the last mile and a half between Louisville and Baltimore today.

Trainer George Conway walked both War Admiral and his stablemate, Army and Navy, the remaining mile and a half between the siding and Pimlico Race Track.

Shutouts Mark Women's Golf Team Matches

Manor, Chevy Chase Score Clean Sweep; Kenwood, Columbia Victors.

Two shutouts marked the Women's D. C. Golf Association's team matches yesterday, Manor upsetting Washington in the second team play at Indian Spring and Chevy Chase blanking Indian Spring at Congressional among the third teams.

Beaver Dam, with a 6 to 3 victory over Columbia in the second team matches, took a one point lead over Congressional and Columbia, 16 to 15. Chevy Chase assumed the lead among the third teams with 17 points, followed by Columbia with 13½.

Congressional and Kenwood were other second team victors with Manor and Columbia following Chevy Chase in third team victories. First teams will play at Indian Spring today and second teams will play at Beaver Dam.

Indians Win Over Red Sox In Overtime

Cleveland Retains Tie for Lead; Cronin's Error Helps.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 10.—The Cleveland Indians retained their first-place tie with the Athletics today with an 11-inning 6 to 5 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Joe Heving and Earl Whitehill held the Bostons to ten hits while the Indians were knocking five Sox pitchers for 17. Cronin's wild throw let Averill in with the winning run.

Miss Hanes Captures Foxcroft Riding Cup

By Grace Brooks.

A Staff Correspondent.

Middleburg, Va., May 10.—Miss June Hanes, of Rye, N. Y., a graduate of the class of 1935, captured the Davis Challenge Cup, which was awarded the best riding alumnae of Foxcroft School at the annual exhibition held here today. Miss Hanes, who won second place in this class last year, impressed the large crowd of sporting folks in attendance with her skillful performance. Miss Teresa Shook, an instructor at the school, won second place. Third place was captured by Miss Laura Sprague, of the class of 1928, who has two legs on the trophy.

The show was marked by excellent horsemanship and good performances. The young ladies of the school rode with skill and daring. Many of the parents were present to see their daughters ride and capture handsome cups offered by the teachers and friends of this sporting institution.

The Greble Cup, presented by Mrs. T. B. Davis for the greatest improvement in riding during 1936-1937, was captured by Miss Betty Lou Dillingham, of Honolulu.

Miss Nancy Penn-Smith, of Unionville, Pa., won the cup given by Miss Eleanor MacKubin for the best horsemanship during the year. Miss Penn-Smith, who rode splendidly in all her classes today, won first place in the contest for older girls. Her mother, Mrs. Plunkett Stewart, was present today to see her daughter win the sporting honors. She also attended the luncheon given by Miss Charlotte H. Nolan, headmistress of the school, for the parents of the seniors.

Miss Sue Ingalls, of Hot Springs, Va., was awarded a cup for good hands shown in 1936-1937. She captured a similar cup last year. Miss Nancy Penn-Smith captured first and second places in the class for ladies' hunters. She rode Miss Charlotte H. Noland's beautiful gray hunter, Rokeby, to win first place, and her own gray Master Tom for second place.

Sports in Brief

Chicago, May 10.—Dominic Mancini, promising lightweight youngster from Louisville, Ky., outpointed Mike Gamiere, of Cleveland, tonight in an eight-round bout at the Marigold Gardens.

Sammy Angott, 130, Washington, Pa., was much too good for Lou Gallop, 137, Duluth, Minn., in another eight-rounder, winning by a technical knockout at 1:41 of the fourth.

Edwin Walling, 130, Detroit, knocked out young Mickey Walker, 124, Sioux City, Iowa, in the second round of the third eight-round battle. Henry Gowatch, 133½, Detroit, won the decision over Georgie Feist, 135, Fargo, N. Dak., in a four-rounder.

New York, May 10.—After declining for four consecutive months, the national income produced in the United States rose sharply in March and came close to regaining the recovery peak reached last October, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The national income in March amounted to $5,779,000,000 as compared with $5,299,000,000 in February and with $5,860,000,000 in October last year. The March figure was 28.2 per cent larger than that for the corresponding month of 1936, when it was $4,508,000,000.

The national income during the first quarter totaled $16,495,000,000,-first quarter totaled $16,495,000,000 this year as against $13,441,000,000 last year, an increase of 22.7 per cent. If the percentage gain over a year ago which occurred in March should be maintained during the remainder of 1937, the annual national income this year would amount to $77,230,000,000, or only $3,804,000,000 less than the record high figure of $81,034,000,000 in 1929. In view of the fact that the 1929 figure represented a high degree of inflation, it is aparent that the soundness of present conditions is open to serious question.

Preliminary reports indicate that the national income showed a further increase in April although it is probable that the gain was smaller than in the previous month in view of the reactionary tendency of commodity prices.

Steel Operations - Up to 91.2%

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced .2 of a point to 91.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 91 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 90.3 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 69.3 per cent.

The Market

New York, May 10.—High-grade bonds were firm, but commodities and stocks worked lower. Poorest prices for the day were reached by stocks in the last hour. Stock turnover was around 800,000 shares, the average for the past week. Price declines of the past three trading sessions have canceled the ground gained since the end of April. July wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 116¼ cents a bushel.

Stocks held at slack water until near the close, after the ebb in the first hour. Opening prices were irregular, but changes were only fractional. Then slow but steady liquidation washed off a point or more from leading issues, including Steel, after which the price variations were negligible. General Motors was unable to benefit from the excellent sales report on April, published after the close of trading on Saturday. Likewise Steel could not rally on its statement of heavy April shipments (which were nevertheless lower than those for April), published at noon. Steel retired to a fraction above par, held there in suspense, and then fell below.

It would not have been surprising for selling pressure to have developed in New York Central, as today was the last occasion to convert bonds into stock at 40, as tomorrow the conversion price rises to 50. The operation brought out sales of stock by those who found it profitable to convert but who did not wish to retain a stock interest. However, Central absorbed the sales well, and while it fell back more than a point it was no weaker than other railroad and industrial stocks of the good grades.

Local traction securities were weak, but the declines were mostly in the bonds. Losses were not as great today, with the adverse report of the Traction Commission on the city's plan for unification, as they were last week when the market, according to its time-honored custom, discounted what it knew would be public property later. Traction bonds lost 1 to 2 points.

Steel Shares Yield.

Steel, railroad and equipment shares were the most affected by the selling. Steels gave up 1 to 3 points and rails dipped 1 to 2 points with a few exceptions. The rise in Santa Fe was stopped. Rail equipments receded 1 to 2 points. Amusements were put under mild pressure. Loews softened 3 points. Metals weakened fractionally. Soft spots in the miscellaneous list were Container, National Supply and Otis Elevator.

Industrial statistics for the new week's consumption were favorable to the markets, but it is now plain that traders for a while are likely to be indifferent to the ordinary run of news. Later, after investment buying has relieved the pressure of disappointed speculative liquidation, the markets will anticipate autumn trade.

This week the steel industry will recover from its slight dip of last week. Operations, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, will be carried at 91.2 per cent of capacity, against 91 per cent last week, which is an extraordinarily high rate for so late in the season. Against the current lull in new ordering, the crowded specification books insure a fast pace for some time.

Meanwhile, the results of April turn out to have been the best since the spring of 1929, as measured by the business handled by the United States Steel Corporation. Steel shipments last month fell moderately from the March total, but the gain over the same month of last year was large. In the four months the corporation's shipments increased 59 per cent over a year ago.

It is too much to expect that no recession in trade will take place this summer, and in view of the uninterrupted rise for the past two years it will be well to slacken the pace in order to avoid too abrupt a correction. At the same time evidence is still lacking that a sharp setback is in early prospect. Crop outlook is good enough to point in the opposite direction.

Meetings.

A large number of important companies will hold yearly stockholders' meetings this week. Tomorrow's list includes Milwaukee, D. & H., K. C. Southern, Missouri Pacific, Frisco, Union Pacific and Continental Oil. On Wednesday are Cerro de Pasco, International Paper and Postal Telegraph. Federal Mining and Worthington Pump will hold special meetings that day for voting on recapitalization plans. On Thursday the Great Northern Railway, International Harvester, Yellow Truck, Mission Corporation (the expected scene of a fight at Reno), and Libby, McNeil & Libby will meet. Recapitalization of Lehman Corporation will come up for a vote at a special meeting on Friday, when the adjourned meeting of Certain-teed Products also will be held. No trouble is likely to develop at any of these meetings, with the possible exception of Mission, where the question of distribution of the company's holdings of Tide Water will be put to a vote.

Steel Corp. April Best Since 1929

New York, May 10 (AP).—United States Steel Corporation today reported April shipments of finished steel were 1,343,644 tons, highest April since 1929 when shipments were 1,498,330 tons. The total was a decrease of 70,755 tons from the preceding month, but an increase of 363,737 tons over April, 1936. For the first four months of 1937 shipments rose to 5,041,685 tons, a gain of 59 per cent over the comparable period last year.

Safe Deposit Meeting Voted Big Success

Annual Convention of National Association Concludes Here.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The recent annual meeting of the National Safe Deposit Association was one of the most successful in the organization's history. Much credit is due Richard E. Harris, general convention chairman; Earle M. Amick, vice chairman; the following sub-committee heads, and those who worked with them:

Hans W. Ireland, program; John F. Hillyard, finance; Charles K. West, reception; Harry P. White, hotels; Miss Eva Ricker, publicity; Thomas E. Elgin, entertainment; Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, ladies committee; Andrew R. Walden, registration; Albert E. Fisher, information; E. Percival Wilson, transportation.

Among speakers at the sessions and their subjects were: Stephen F. Wadsworth, Boston, "What Is the Association and What Are the Objectives of a State Association?" Martin L. Jensen, Chase Safe Deposit Co., New York, "Organization;" Andrew H. Troeger, Safe Deposit & Trust Co., Baltimore, "Personnel;" George J. Keevil, Westfield Trust Co., New Jersey, "The Challenge to Association Existence;" E. D. Madden, of McCann-Erickseon, New York, "Co-operative Advertising." Secretary Frederick P. H. Siddons, of the American Security & Trust Co., outlined methods of upbuilding new safe deposit business in banks.

Miss Wills a Speaker.

Miss Elizabeth A. Wills, of the First National Bank, Cincinnati, who has made an expert study of the subject, presented many practical ideas on "Customer Relations." John W. Brown, secretary and manager, National Safe Deposit Co., Chicago, spoke on "Vault and Box Insurance," and Ralph D. Slaymaker, manager, Union Safe Deposit Co., Kansas City, on "The Safe Deposit Department,—an Asset." At the closing banquet, Thomas W. Brahany, local manager of E. A. Pierce & Co., was toastmaster, and Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, talked on "Today."

F. T. Coxe, Philadelphia, was re-elected president of the National Safe Deposit Advisory Council; Ralph D. Slaymaker, of Kansas City, Mo., was re-elected vice president, and Kenneth W. Murray, New Haven, Conn., secretary-treasurer. Mr. Harris, local convention chairman, was named a member of the advisory council and other members elected were: S. F. Wadsworth, Boston; Carroll Brown, Minneapolis, Gardner Purrell, Los Angeles; Carl W. Johnson, Kenosha, Wis., and John W. Williams, Chicago. The Safe Deposit Association of Richmond, Va., was admitted to membership in the council. Sessions were held at the Willard Hotel.

Fleming on Lanston Board.

Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank and immediate past president of the American Bankers Association, was elected a member of the board of directors of Lanston Monotype Machine Co., at the recent annual meeting of stockholders at Alexandria, Va. He succeeds the late Karl W. Corby.

Henry Parsons, of New York City, presided at the meeting and J. Thilman Hendrick, chairman of the board, entertained members of the directorate at a luncheon at his Washington residence, following the business meeting at Alexandria. All officers were re-elected as follows: Mr. Hendrick, chairman of the board; Harvey D. Best, president; T. Frank Morgan, first vice president; John T. Meadth, A. E. Pagola, and Frank J. Roderick, vice presidents; John A. Ferguson, secretary; Allen R. Fretz, assistant secretary; Wilfred Bancroft, treasurer and general manager, and Harvey W. Monks, assistant treasurer.

Sacks Re-elected.

E. J. Sacks was re-elected president of the Washington Permanent Building Association at the recent annual meeting of the stockholders. Besides Mr. Sacks, who was one of the founders and first directors of the organization, the following officers were elected: John Henderson, vice president; Carl J. Bergmann, treasurer; Herman H. Bergmann, secretary; C. Chester Caywood, general counsel. Members of the board of directors are: John H. Clipper, C. Rammling, James R. Ellis, Clyde H. Miller, Mr. Caywood, Max Walten, Joseph N. Saunders and Walter B. Avery. The association had a fine business year.

Banking Notes.

Frank J. F. Thiel, manager of the Washington office of J. S. Bache & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, has announced appointment of L. B. Brubaker as assistant manager of that office. New customers men there are John A. Pelton and Frank Bastable. The local office is one of 44 of the company in the United States with correspondents in the major cities of Europe.

Chauncey G. Parker, jr., partner in Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, and recently retiring as president of the Ticker Club of Washington, was host at a dinner to members of the latter organization at the Chevy Chase Club. Ever since the founding of the club it has been the custom of the retiring president to entertain the membership with a dinner.

John A. Purcell has become associated with the Washington office of Mackubin, Legg & Co.

Roland T. Carr, Riggs National Bank, who qualified for first place in the public speaking contest of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, recently, won third place in the district contest of the institute at Charleston, W. Va., Saturday. Jason Stockbridge, of Baltimore Chapter, won first place and will be a competitor in the national contest, held at St. Paul, Minn., in June, in connection with the convention of the institute. J. Earle McGeary, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., member of the national public speaking contest committee of the institute, presided at the Charleston competition.

Auction Sales

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, SIX ROOMS AND BATH, HOT-WATER HEAT, 2732 WOODLEY PLACE N.W., WITH TWO-CAR GARAGE IN REAR.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in liber No. 6794, folio 507, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on TUESDAY, THE ELEVENTH DAY OF MAY, 1937, AT 3:30 O'CLOCK P. M., the following described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 74 in Harry L. Light's subdivision of lots in Block 19, "Woodley Park," as per plat recorded in Liber 70 at folio 146 in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia; said block 19 being now known for purposes of assessment and taxation as square 2208. Subject to the right of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust, their heirs and assigns, within a period of 60 days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum, from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Chancery Sale of Valuable Apartment Hotel Property Known as "The Dupont Circle" Located on Connecticut Avenue at Dupont Circle, Being a 12-Story Brick Building and Valuable Apartment Hotel Property Formerly Known as the "Arlington" Located at 1019-1025 Vermont Avenue N.W., Being a 10-Story Brick Building.

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia in Equity Cause No. 63618, the undersigned trustee will sell at public auction, subject to ratification by the court, at the front door of the Court House of the District of Columbia on

MONDAY, MAY 24, 1937,
AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M.

Lot number thirteen (13) in Edson Bradley's Combination of part of Square numbered one hundred and thirty-eight (138) as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 43 at folio 65, together with any and all buildings thereon and all other property so attached thereto as to constitute part of the realty, all in the District of Columbia. Said property is to be sold subject to the following liens and possible inchoate right of dower, namely:

(A) An existing deed of trust dated December 31, 1930, appearing for record in Liber 6520 at folio 457 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, securing a certain promissory note of Joseph J. Moebs in the sum of $1,350,000.00 with interest at the rate of 5½% per annum. (The Trustees are advised that maturity of this deed of trust has been extended to December 31, 1938, and is of a present unpaid balance of $1,274,100.00, bearing interest at the rate of 5¼% per annum, payable monthly, and principal payments of $4,200.00 a month, payable monthly, are required.)

(B) An existing deed of trust bearing date of January 7, 1931, appearing for record in Liber 6520 at folio 465 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds to secure the payment of certain notes dated April 11, 1928, made by Joseph J. Moebs in the aggregate principal amount of $400,000.00 payable on or before five (5) years after said date, with interest at the rate of 5½% per annum. (Said deed of trust contains a provision that the release thereof may be obtained upon the payment of $50,000.00, with respect to which prospective bidders are referred to the recorded instrument. The Trustees are advised that the deed of trust has matured and interest thereon at 4% per annum is overdue from October 11, 1936).

(C) Such inchoate right of dower as Bertha J. Moebs, the former wife of Joseph J. Moebs, had and may still retain in said property.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash and the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years from date of sale and to be represented by the promissory notes of the purchaser, bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. The property is to be sold subject to the above encumbrances, interest thereon, and inchoate right of dower and taxes unpaid or accrued. A $5,000.00 deposit shall be required of the purchaser at the time of said sale.

MONDAY, MAY 24, 1937,
AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M.

Lot numbered forty-seven (47) in Moebs Combination of Lots in Square 317 as per plat recorded in the Surveyor's Office in the District of Columbia in Liber 55 at folio 107, together with any and all buildings thereon and all other property so attached thereto as to constitute part of the realty, all in the District of Columbia and subject to the following liens and possible inchoate right of dower:

(A) An existing deed of trust bearing date of April 11, 1928, appearing for record in Liber 6136 at folio 483 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, securing the payment of 120 certain promissory notes of Joseph J. Moebs in the aggregate amount of $900,000.00, all payable on or before five years after date, with interest at the rate of 5½% per annum. (The Trustees are advised that said deed of trust is now overdue and in default, the unpaid balance being $400,000.00 with interest at 4% per annum from October 11, 1936.)

(B) A certain lease dated December 9, 1933, made by Joseph J. Moebs to the Arlington Hotel Company, Inc., lessee, covering the property above described for a period of ten (10) years ending December 8, 1943, further particulars of which, and the assignment thereof by the lessor, to be given at the time of sale.

(C) Such inchoate right of dower as Bertha J. Moebs, the former wife of Joseph J. Moebs, had and may still retain in said property.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash and the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years from date of sale and to be represented by the promissory notes of the purchaser, bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. The property is to be sold subject to the above encumbrances, interest thereon, said inchoate right of dower and taxes unpaid or accrued. A $5,000.00 deposit shall be required of the purchaser at the time of said sale.

TERMS APPLICABLE TO BOTH SALES—All conveyancing, notary fees, recording, revenue stamps and examination of title to be at the cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty (30) days from the approval and ratification thereof by the Court, otherwise the Trustees reserve the right to resell at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser after five (5) days' notice by advertisement of the resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Actors Rejoice, But Craftsmen Continue Strike

Stars 'Double-Crossed' Union, Leader Claims; Fight Widened.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Calif., May 10.—War and peace reigned side by side in the halls of Hollywood's $2,000,000,000 motion picture industry today.

The craftsmen, disappointed but not discouraged by this development, dug in for a protracted struggle with the producers, augmenting picket lines around the studios, and carrying the battle to major theaters in Hollywood and Los Angeles.

In a riotously jubilant mass meeting last night, members of the powerful Screen Actors' Guild were told by their officers that producers had agreed to demands for a "Guild ship," a minimum of $50 a week salary for stock players, a $5.50 per day minimum for extra players, and an increase of from $15 to $25 per day for "bit" players.

Stars Rejoice.

The audience—composed of most of the high-salaried stars in the business, including Mae West, Robert Montgomery, Joan Crawford, Warren William, Gary Cooper, Otto Kruger, Fred MacMurray, Chester Morris, William Powell and Jean Harlow—staged a noisy demonstration at the news.

It meant they would not be called out on strike.

Today a producers' representative announced seven major studios have accepted agreement. They were RKO-Radio, Paramount, M-G-M, Universal, Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox and Hal Roach. Formal contracts with all studios, said Guild Secretary Aubrey Blair, will be signed this week.

"Dirty Double-Cross."

"The fact that the actors are still on the pay rolls helps us," asserted Charles Kimberlin, strike committee official. "It simply means that the producers will have to go on meeting that big six-figure pay roll every week. They will be paying for idleness as long as our men are out."

Lessing said the picketing would continue, and that, with backing from the Committee for Industrial Organization, Nation-wide picketing and boycott of theaters would begin today.

The stars passed the picket lines today, and without incident. Blair said that organization had given the Federated Crafts "as much support as possible," adding that the E. M. A. C. had called its strike prematurely.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"There goes Dominick pulling that nearsighted gag again!"

"Grin and Bear It" has just started as a regular daily feature of The Post. It also appears in The Sunday Post all-star color comic section.

On the Air Today

Today's most-important radio news really has to do with tomorrow—because the time differential between London and America brings us the coronation ceremonies at an unusually early hour. WMAL and WJSV are scheduled to open at 4 a. m., with WOL following at 4:15. WRC is about out of the picture, taking only the actual coronation at 9 o'clock.

For those who have no interest in the crowning of Britain's King, Gordon Hittenmark will be on deck as usual at 6 and will continue until 9. At WJSV, Arthur Godfrey sleeps an hour later and the "Sun Dial" hits the air at 8 for a half hour.

At WOL, Art Brown gets an entire morning's vacation from his "early rising" and the Mutual station's schedule seems to be the most complete of the city's outlets, continuing almost without interruption from 4:15 through 9:15.

Later in the day the Washington stations will provide other programs from London or otherwise a part of the coronation ceremonies. These include the King's talk at 2 p. m.; John Masefield, England's poet laureate, at 5:45; "Homage of Empire," at 1:20; English Speaking Union banquet, at 8:30; Winnipeg royal salute, 1:15 and others.

You may also wish to keep in mind that both WOL and WMAL will present transcribed broadcasts, taken during the early morning, for their evening audiences.

Features today:

Salute to King George—Hollywood stars in program short waves to England. WMAL, at 2. With Douglas Fairbanks, jr., as master of ceremonies and including Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, A. Aubry Smith, Raymond Massey and music by Ray Noble and orchestra.

"Story of Song"—In new series (Columbia Concert Hall) with the Russian basso, Max Panteleieff. This series features younger American and European singers.

Fred Astaire—Introduces a new song he has written, "Just One More Dance," WRC, at 8:30. Charley Butterworth has a party in tonight's program.

• • • •

Here and there: Ronald Dawson gleefully announces the acquisition of John Sikken, who has just returned from Broadway for the summer, for Northern Dramatic Company plays. Tonight's (WOL, at 10) is "Ten o'Clock," starring Ruth Perrot. . . . Joan Blaine, who has been confined to the hospital for so long now, is back in radio harness again. She's Joan Houstin in "A Tale of Today." . . . Now that the derby is over for another year, N. B. C. is turning its attention to the Indianapolis 500-mile race Decoration Day. There'll be some preliminary events, too. . . . Have heard of a couple incidents of near-fisticuffs resulting over discussion of Robert Morrison's dramatic recording of the burning of the Hindenburg. It seems a couple of skeptics in each instance insisted the record that was broadcast last Friday night was a fake! Them's fightin' words with radio men.

Paul Chabas, French Artist, Is Dead at 68

Chabas, an invalid confined to a three-story house on the outskirts of Paris, was content with his own copy of the picture. The original hangs in a great Paris townhouse, not many miles from the suburb where the artist spent his last years.

The picture is now the property of C. S. Gulbenkian, a wealthy Armenian. The artist had not seen it since Gulbenkian bought it several years ago.

But so deeply was Chabas impressed with his masterpiee he insisted he remembered every line and every shade perfectly.

"If I had never seen it from the day I put my brushes down after painting it, I could make a perfect copy," he once declared.

"Matinee de Septembre" was painted at Talloires, a little village on the shore of Lake Annecy, in upper Savoy. A peasant girl, her name now lost in the past, served as the model.

No one ever learned the price paid for the original. But Chabas, then an established artist, was known to have virtually dictated his prices. At least three of his pictures have brought 100,000 francs each, a sum equivalent today to about 400,000 francs, or $18,000.

Works Widely Scattered.

Chabas was by no means a "one picture" artist. His best paintings are scattered in museums and collections throughout the world. "Reverie" hangs in the Munich Museum, while another famous work, "La Baigneuse—The Bather," is in the museum at Luxembourg.

Chabas' road to glory was the conventional one for French artists of his generation. Born in Nantes, he first won recognition in 1892, when a portrait of his was given honorable mention in the annual salon held by the Society of French Artists.

Wife Died in 1933.

Chabas had done little painting since 1925. Four years ago his wife died and since that time he has lived with a housekeeper and a trained nurse.

His copy of "September Morn" made him attempt often to evoke the past and to bring back the glittering days when his brush could capture beauty. He was always willing to talk about his famous painting.

"I love that picture," he said recently. "They call it my masterpiece—perhaps it is. I only know that in it is all that I know of painting."

Crowds Menace King and Queen At Rehearsal

James W. Gerard, special United States envoy to the coronation, was a guest at the banquet, wearing ceremonial knee breeches for the first time at a State function. He was seated in a place of honor at King George's own table.

Gen. John J. Pershing, also a special envoy, attended wearing a general's full dress uniform. Other American guests included Ambassador Robrt W. Bingham and Admiral Hugh Rodman, of the official delegation.

Liveried footmen, passing through the state dining room with its buff-colored walls, crimson carpets and hangings and priceless art treasures, carried food prepared by a staff of 30 palace cooks and their assistants.

More Liners Arrive.

Outside the famous palace in the glare of floodlights, the gigantic crowd, turning the Mall with its 70-foot high white coronation masts into a 100-feet-wide ribbon of humanity, massed against the locked arms and prancing horses of hundreds of policemen.

It was an evening crowd spectacle without equal so far in the coronation festivities—a crowd that roared "God save the King" as the banners of an empire flicked in the breeze over their heads.

At Victoria and Charing Cross railway terminals, nearly 200,000 tickets were collected from visitors from British provinces.

Thousands of extra porters and customs officials were on duty. Scenes of confusion unrivaled in tourist travel were enacted.

The dense throngs that gathered around Buckingham Palace tonight were duplicated earlier in the day when the King and Queen gave a luncheon for visiting royalty.

Roar Greets Princesses.

There were wild cheers at each glimpse of an arriving prince, then a prolonged and strident roar as Princess Elizabeth, 11-year-old heiress presumptive, appeared at a palace window with her little 6-year-old sister, Margaret Rose.

There were great ovations, too, for Queen Mother Mary, arriving with Queen Maud of Norway, the Duke and Duchess of Kent and Prince Nicholas of Greece.

Earlier, at Westminister Abbey, the young Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshal of England, who has acted as "understudy" for the king in being crowned with a pasteboard imitation in Westminster rehearsals, greeted the monarch on the steps of the Abbey. The King and Queen personally rehearsed their parts for Wednesday's ceremony.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, who will crown the King, walked to the Abbey just before the royal pair arrived.

A steady drizzle that failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the crowds gave way to clear skies. The weather forecast was for possible thunderstorms tomorrow, but sunny "king's weather" was expected for Wednesday's big show.

U. S. Celebrities Just Small Fry At Coronation

American Notables Keep Out of Spotlight Amid London Crowds.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10.—Representatives of some 500,000,000 American dollars arrived in London today without making a ripple in London's coronation sea.

They didn't try to stop the coronation celebrations and royalty's big show; they just came to look.

In the welter of visiting crowned heads, princes, dukes, earls and baronets, American celebrities had no chance to make a big splash, and they didn't try to.

The American visitors are paying high prices for hotel rooms and tickets to see the coronation procession Wednesday, but otherwise they generally are keeping their money in their pockets.

The Americans have no parties planned in competition with those of royalty, gold plate banquets and ducal balls.

Most American visitors are quartered in London's smartest hotels, although a few are installed in large houses. The United States Ambassador to Russia, Joseph E. Davies, and Mrs. Davis arrived on the Bremen and took a house.

Also among the arrivals: J. R. H. Cromwell, Philadelphia banker, and Mrs. Cromwell, the former Doris Duke; Count and Countess Haugwitz von Reventlow, she the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, to spend the coronation season at their house in Regent Park.

Representatives of the sports world—Alice Marble, tennis star, and Stephen Sanford, internationally known polo player, and Mrs. Sanford. Edmund Lowe, film star, here to make a picture, and Mrs. Lowe; Tallulah Bankhead, actress daughter of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Down in regal Oxford street floodlights blazed tonight on $125,000 worth of splendor decorating the front of the great department store of Gordon Selfridge, once of Ripon, Wis.

Selfridge, 74, a London merchant for 32 years, applied for British citizenship the other day and the belief is general that soon his reward will come, a knighthood.

Selfridge has put up some breathtaking decorations at his store . . . Eleven sculptors modeled 18 panels in plaster 20 feet high along the front of the building, each representing a scene in British history from the time of the Druids to the Armistice . . .

Son, Who Slew Father Aiding Mother, Cleared

Atlanta, May 10 (AP).—A Dekalb County coroner's jury today declared the fatal shooting of Arthur W. Everett by his 16-year-old son, Warren, "justifiable homicide." The jury heard evidence that the fatal shooting was a climax to a quarrel between Everett and his wife.

Young Everett, a Tech High School student, testified he grabbed a revolver and shot when he heard his mother scream and found his father threatening her with a butcher knife, this morning. The dead man was a Government meat inspector.

5 U. S. Steamship Lines Available for Charter

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday it is preparing to advertise the charter for one year, five Government owned steamship lines now being operated by private interests.

The five lines are the America France, American Republics, American Hampton Roads-Yankee, Oriole and American Pioneer. They operate a total of 37 vessels.

Queen Mother and Elizabeth Given Royal Victorian Chain

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10.—Queen Mother Mary and Queen Elizabeth were awarded the Royal Victorian Chain, high honor reserved for special occasions, in King George VI's coronation honors list, announced tonight.

Lady Astor, member of Parliament and the former Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia, was made a companion of honor, recognition of distinguished service of national importance.

The list admitted women for the first time to the Royal Victorian Order, named dames grand cross of the order were the Queen of Norway, the Princess Royal, the Duchess of Atholl, and Princess Beatrice.

100 Knighted.

Martin Retraces Catalina Flight

Avalon, Calif., May 10 (AP).—Turning back the pages of history 25 years, Glenn Martin retraced the route of his epochal transchannel flight today to the cheers of thousands.

The noted aircraft builder, flying in the huge China clipper of his own make, and flanked by two Martin bombers of the United States Navy, landed on blue Avalon Bay at Santa Catalina Island at noon. He completed in 15 minutes what it took him 37 minutes to do a quarter of a century ago as the first airman ever to fly from Newport Bay to this island playground off the Southern California coast.

Private Hunt Made For Missing Co-ed

Delaware, Ohio, May 10 (AP).—Parents of Ruth Baumgardner asked today that a private detective be given a free hand in investigating the disappearance of the blond Ohio Wesleyan University student.

As nebulous tips continued to appear, only to be discarded, no definite trace has been discovered of the attractive 22-year-old senior who disappeared from her dormitory the night of May 4.

Police and university officials said they had been asked to leave the case in the hands of the detective, whose identity was not made public.
